Americana Auctions ends 40-year run with holiday themed event

By Richard Junger

GRAND LEDGE, Mich. — Glen Rairigh started his career as a social services worker, but the chant of the auctioneer slowly lured him into the antiques and auction business, especially selling holiday-related items.

In late October, Rairigh and his wife Wendy, ended their 40 year run as Americana Auctions with a closeout live auction in Grand Ledge, Mich.

The top seller was a non-holiday item. A Mechanical Clockwork Juggling Dog Nodder automaton had no maker's mark, but at 27-inches in height it was a good catch at $1,650. The colorful clockwork wound juggling poodle dog was dressed in a red top hat, blue jacket, and red trousers with a prominent windup key. In his hands he tossed three soft juggling balls, maybe as homage to a circus.

An only slightly shorter all-white Father Christmas figure was hammered at $950. His stern face, hooded winter coat, and carrying a bundle of kindling wood and cone with treats suggested a German "Belsnickel".

A Beaux-Arts and Art Nouveau-influenced two-bulb bronze electric lamp was sold for $550. The two art glass shades were signed Steuben, likely made of either their Gold Aurene or Calcite glass. A nicely symmetrical diamond-shaped panel in the bronze base had either a shell or mosaic inlay, suggesting but not identified as a Tiffany Studios base.

A rare 19-inch Pairpoint reverse-painted glass shade lamp reached $525. The Massachusetts-based Pairpoint company produced reverse-painted lamps between 1905 and 1925 dating this piece. This lamp's artists created a colorful autumn scene on curved glass.

Goose feather Christmas trees were a latter 19th-century German tradition in which craftsmen dyed feathers green to simulate needles, then wrapped or secured them around wire branches. The branches were twisted around a green wooden pole and inserted into a wooden trunk base, frequently covered with brown paper to resemble bark.

Above: A pair of German-made larger paper jack-o-lanterns were sold at $375 and a smaller set at $275.

Two examples standing 50 and 53 inches tall brought $500 and $300. Popular in the 1920s, their German makers even sold them through the Montgomery Ward department store.

A 21-inch feather tree mounted in a folk-art "memory jar" sold for $125. The jar had buttons and other personal keepsake items pressed into a plaster or putty exterior, perhaps as a memorial to a loved one.

Ny-Lint toys were tough and survived for collecting

By Larry LeMasters

For nearly 60 years Ny-Lint excelled at one thing — manufacturing pressed steel toy vehicles.

Ny-Lint was family owned and operated. In fact, the word "Ny-Lint" is a combination of the two founders' names — David Nyberg and Bernard Klint.

In 1937, Nyberg and Klint incorporated under the name "Ny-Lint Tool and Manufacturing" in Rockford, Ill. Originally, Ny-Lint did not produce toys. For the first few years of its life, the company manufactured kitchen utensils, primarily a cheese slicer, gravy strainer, and flour shifter.

This #1400 Ny-Lint Road Grader, 1951–'58, is in good condition

During these early years, Ny-Lint also designed and manufactured special-order tooling work, making cast aluminum parts for auto companies and refrigerator parts for home appliance companies.

Ny-Lint possessed a state-of-the-art tool and die and metal-stamping facility. Listening to predictions about the booming baby population following World War II, Ny-Lint decided to design and manufacture steel-pressed toys. Toward this end, Ny-Lint hired Carl Swenson and began producing a windup toy car that Swenson had designed.

This toy car, called the "Amazing Car," was shown to financial success at the 1946 Toy Fair held in New York City. Ny-Lint sold orders for over 100,000 Amazing Cars during this Toy Show, making Ny-Lint a force to be reckoned with in the American pressed-steel toy industry.

The late 1940s and early'50s witnessed Ny-Lint making several different windup toys, which was Ny-Lint's specialty for a short time. One of the earliest Ny-Lint windup toys is a front end loader that resembles a forklift. This loader is highly sought by collectors. Around 1950, Above: Vintage Ny-Lint Elgin Street Sweeper #1100, 1950-'52. In restorable condition this vehicle is valued at $90.

Ny-Lint manufactured the "Elgin Street Sweeper," that resembled a real Elgin machine. The popularity of this toy showed Ny-Lint that $500. Unlike the larger, fabric-clothed Father Christmas, this smaller figure had a molded composition body, hand-painted facial features, and black boots emerging from a snow-covered base. German makers frequently dusted such figures with mica flakes to imitate the wintery sparkle of snow, a decorative technique appealing to today's collectors.

A cobalt-blue stoneware jug in near perfect condition sold for $400. Perhaps marked "C. Thorp – Mogadore Ohio", it featured a design that could have been a snake or a highly-stylized floral design.

A wide variety of Halloween pieces were offered just days before that holiday. Top sellers were a pair of larger paper jack-o-lanterns that were hammered at $375 and a smaller set at $275. Their makers used recycled cardboard to create pumpkin halves, painted them orange, and glued them together. Their theatrical-style appearances were more funny than frightful. Many were designed to hold candles, with translucent tissue-paper or printed-paper inserts behind the eyes, nose and mouth to mask a flame. When illuminated, the faces glowed. Few examples with their tissue paper remain.

A Lundberg Studios blue Van Gogh Sunset art glass boudoir lamp sold for $350. Lundberg, who helped found a California glass studio in 1973, was known for intricate handmade glass, including decorative work influenced by the Art Nouveau movement. A gold Stephen Lundberg iridescent art-glass Lava vase sold for $225 while a white version went for $190. The white and gold vases featured raised, swirling decoration identified as his Lava design, in the same style as the lamp.

Above: A smaller Belsnickel candy container sold for $500. The blue eyes, pronounced wrinkles, and rather severe expression were characteristic of the German Belsnickel.

An absentee buyer paid $100 for what could only be described as a Bad Santa. The bedraggled 26-inch Claus had electric light bulb eyes that didn't work. With his clothing he probably dated to the 1940s or 1950s, perhaps made in the shop of the Harold Gale Santa Co. The electrical novelty recalled an era when manufacturers were adding lighting and movement to Christmas decorations and commercial displays.

Rairigh and his wife are uncertain about their future. While Americana will not be conducting any future in-person auctions, Rairigh said that an online version "in maybe a year or so" might be a possibility. Check back at americanaauctions.com great success could be achieved by producing toys patterned after actual, full-size vehicles.

Ny-Lint

By the late 1950s, Ny-Lint was producing battery-operated vehicles, such as the #2300 Elgin Street Sweeper. Produced for only two years, this Ny-Lint toy is considered quite rare in good condition.

Historians often break Ny-Lint's manufacturing history into eight distinct phases or eras. Around 1951, Ny-Lint entered its 4th phase—the "Heavy Construction Era." Lasting for 15 years, until 1966, the manufacturing of heavy construction toy vehicles dominated Ny-Lint's production during this era.

The first construction toy manufactured by Ny-Lint was the #1300 Tournarocker, patterned after the real machine made by the R.G. LeTourneau Company of Peoria, Ill. These early Tournarockers were produced for only seven years, 1951–1956, and larger hubcaps indicate the earliest models. Soon after producing the Tournarocker, Ny-Lint designed a realistic-looking road grader—its #1400, which was manufactured from 1951 – 1958. The grader was offered in construction orange most years, but in 1957, Ny-Lint manufactured some yellow ones, which are hard to find today.

Parents liked Ny-Lint toys since they were high quality and inexpensive, and Made in the USA. Children loved them because they were large and, for the most part, unbreakable. Ny-Lint toys allowed kids to go into their backyards and move earth just like their dads did at work.

Following the Heavy Construction Era, Ny-Lint manufactured toy military vehicles during its Cold War Era, and, starting around 1960, Ny-Lint entered its Ford Motor Company Era which peaked around 1965 when most of Ny-Lint's toys were patterned after Ford vehicles.

Above: Ny-Lint Ford truck and trailer in near mint condition. Manufactured in mid-1960s and still valued at around $85.

During the 1960s, Ny-Lint became one of the first toy manufacturers to openly place other company names and logos on Ny-Lint-made toys, such as Ford labels on the entire Ford series. The word "Ford" was even stamped into tailgates and into hubcaps, making every detail of the vehicles as authentic to the real vehicle as possible.

Sadly, by 2001, Ny-Lint was in trouble. It had manufactured pressed-steel toys for 55 years as other toy companies came and went or were purchased by large companies. Ny-Lint remained a family-owned business until, after filing for bankruptcy protection, the remains of Ny-Lint was sold to the Funrise Toy Corporation of California.

An excellent resource guide for Ny-Lint collectibles is Bostrom's Vintage NY-LINT Toy Guide by Carl Bostrom (Bostrom and Raymond, 2005). This guide primarily highlights Bostrom's own collection, but the depth of the collection and the condition of his Ny-Lint vehicles is amazing.

Spalding baseball bat hit a $360 bid at Leonard's Auction

By Nancy Kelly

TOLEDO, Ohio — Leonard's Auction recently hosted an outstanding antique, early American, and folk art auction. Many items from the 18th and 19th centuries provided a glimpse into life during a simpler time. This sale offered a chance to purchase art and other useful items that had stood the test of time, were well made, and attractive. Prices listed here do not include the buyer's premium.

Sports fans were offered a treat when the vintage 1920s/30s Spalding Premier Model 151 wood baseball bat crossed the block. The knob bore the "Spalding Trade Mark" stamp inside the baseball logo, the grip was neatly taped, and it came complete with original canvas sleeve. The 32.5-inch-long bat was in very good condition and was claimed with a final bid of $360.

Above: A vintage 1920s/30s Spalding Premier Model 151 wood baseball bat complete with original canvas sleeve in very good condition was claimed with a final bid of $360.

Handmade quilts are always a popular item. Two at this sale showcased the Grandmother's Flower Garden traditional pattern. The style consists of six-sided hexagonal blocks staggered to give the appearance of a honeycomb, each with a flower inside. The first one measured 78 by 86 inches and was in excellent, clean condition with no flaws or damage. It finished with a final bid of $290. A narrower one also in great condition closed at $235.

Above: A cleverly designed antique country primitive Queen Anne pine tilt top tavern table/bench was rehomed with a final bid of $120.

Pottery folk art was well received in various forms including a couple of humorous pieces. An 11-inch-tall Chester Hewell folk art glazed redware southern pottery ugly face jug displayed a distorted face with large eyes and a scowling expression. The artist's signature was etched into the pottery under the base, the finish was a glossy black glaze, and there was a large handle on the back of the head. This grim character was claimed with a high bid of $275. A 6-inch tall redware ugly face spittoon signed by artist Michael Crocker was done in a similar style. The rough gray glazed pitcher-like item with side handle was topped by a 6-inch-wide basin that could function quite well as a spittoon. It also bore the artist's signature etched into the clay. It was rehomed with a final bid of $65. On the more useful side, an antique yellowware blue band stoneware pottery mixing and serving bowl set consisted of six pieces ranging from the largest at 9 inches in diameter down to the smallest at 4.5 inches. The set closed at $180. A single 14-inch diameter antique yellowware stoneware pottery mixing or serving bowl with a delicate blue seaweed pattern inside the blue and white band closed at $120 despite some age crazing. A vintage Dutch Delft ceramic vase with numerous spouts would allow tulips to be supported and shown individually. The underside had the words "Delft Handwerx Holland" written along with the drawing of a fish. It stood 8 inches tall and was decorated with intricate drawings of flowers in blue, yellow, red, and green. A final bid of $80 claimed it.

Mixed in with the vintage art, a very contemporary piece also left its mark. A 9-inch-tall Sun Person sculpture created by Stan Bitters was created in terracotta glazed earthenware. As was his style, the piece had a sunshine-shaped head with a smiling face on both the front and back and upraised hands. The artist is known for creating small items like birdhouses as well as larger architectural forms. This happy figure was taken with a final bid of $155.

An exceptionally well made antique primitive early American rolling factory shoe rack constructed of sturdy oak earned high honors at this varied auction. The six wood shelves were expertly assembled, and the original industrial casters were still connected and functional. Standing 55 inches tall by 21 inches wide, it was ready to move on to its next assignment with a final bid of $275. Another early American antique wood item was also very eagerly claimed. This massive pine farmhouse pie safe with porcelain knobs on the double doors and original wood latches featured mesh on the front and sides to allow air flow. It measured 48 inches tall by 51 inches wide. Some cracks developed in the wood top over time, but most of the structure was in stable condition and earned a final bid of $195. Other antique pantry cabinets or jelly cupboards closed from $105-175.

Right: Stan Bitters created this 9-inch-tall Sun Person sculpture in terracotta glazed earthenware. This contemporary piece was taken with a final bid of $155.

A cleverly designed 18th century antique country primitive Queen Anne pine tilt top tavern table/bench was another example of furniture that had a history yet was ready for a new location. This impressive item measured 51 inches wide and 31 inches deep in the table position. When not in use as a table the top tilted back. This exposed a bench with the raised tabletop becoming a chair back. This sturdy relic was rehomed with a final bid of $120.

To provide romantic lighting during dinner, a set of two wall-mount vintage Colonial Revival mirrored tole tin sconces consisted of several reflective surfaces to allow the light from their candles to shine in varying patterns. They were equipped with bands on the back for easy mounting and the reflectors measured 12 inches tall. This lovely set in good condition finished at $130.
