RJM had diverse auction from wedding finery to air compressor

BY NANCY KELLY

PLYMOUTH, Mich. — When Bombay Wedding Events of Oak Park and Mistry Weddings and Events of Detroit needed to disperse some of their exotic Indian wedding inventory, they turned to R. J. Montgomery & Assoc., Inc to handle the job. The RJM auctioneers are accustomed to helping industrial companies downsize, typically selling large equipment, semi-trucks, trailers, and other machinery. But with their capable staff, excellent online presence, and professional approach, they were ready and willing to tackle the assignment. Other, more typical RJM items were also offered at this diverse auction. There was a one-day preview scheduled prior to the online sale.

The two wedding service companies used their items to create an entire event for the wedding couple, including large items to stage the ceremony and small pieces to decorate it. A Hindu or Jain wedding ceremony may take place in the mandap at the front of the room, which consists of pillars, canopies and arches. This auction offered a stylish gold and ivory Jodah Akbar mandap which included 10 large pillars standing 104 inches tall and a matching archway 122 inches long. This handsome arrangement

Early American-made pewter can be expensive to collect

BY LARRY LEMASTERS'

Pewter is a metal alloy, traditionally between 85 and 99 percent tin, with the remaining elements consisting of 1 to 15 percent copper, which acts as a hardener. Occasionally, lead was added to the lower grades of pewter, which gives pewter a bluish tint. The word "pewter" is probably a variation of the word spelter. "Spelter" became peautre in French, and many other languages. From the French, the English derived the word "pewter."

There are three grades of pewter: 1) fine, for eating ware, with 96-99 percent tin, and 1 to 4 percent copper; 2) trifle, also for eating and drinking utensils but duller in appearance, with 92 percent tin, 1 to 6 percent copper, and up to 4 percent lead; and 3) lay or "ley" metal, not for eating or drinking utensils, which could contain up to 15 percent lead. Modern pewter mixes the tin with copper, antimony, and/or bismuth as opposed to lead. The lead additive made certain grades of pewter heavier than other grades, and as a rule of thumb, the lighter the piece, the better made it is since lead-based pewter is the cheapest form of pewter.

Physically, pewter is a bright, shiny metal that is very similar in appearance to silver; hence, when it was first commercially offered for sale, pewter became known as the "Poor Man's Silver." Like silver, pewter oxidizes to a dull gray over time if left untreated. Pewter is a very malleable alloy, being soft enough to carve with hand tools, and it also takes good impressions from punches or presses. Because of this inherent softness and malleability, however, pewter cannot be used as a tool-making metal. Some types of pewter pieces, such as candlesticks, were turned on a metal lathe. Pieces produced through this technique are sometimes referred to as “holloware.”

Use of pewter was common from pre-Roman times through the Middle Ages, continuing its popularity until the various developments in glassmaking and pottery during the 18th and 19th centuries. About 1850 (about the beginning of the Industrial Revolution), stoneware and china replaced pewter as the chief tableware. Mass production of glass products later replaced pewter in day-to-day usage.

Pewter gradually stopped being used and by 1850, it was just about gone. Around 1950, however, a resurgence of the craft brought pewter back from extinction. Many American housewives of the 1950s and ‘60s collected pewter pieces. Pewter pieces and reproductions continue production today, mainly as decorative or specialty items.

Unlidded mugs and lidded tankards may be the most familiar pewter artifacts from the late 17th and 18th centuries, although the metal is also used for many other items including porringers (a shallow cup or bowl with a handle), plates, dishes, basins, spoons, measures, flagons, communion cups, teapots, sugar bowls, steins and cream jugs. In the early 19th century, changes of fashion witnessed a decline in the use of pewter flatware, but demand increased production of both cast and spun pewter tea sets, whale-oil lamps, candlesticks, etc. Later in the century, pewter alloys were often used as a base metal for silver-plated objects.

Surprisingly, early American pewter is more valuable than European pewter of the same era. Hardy pewter smiths founded the American pewter trade. Prior to the American Revolution, tin was unavailable in the American Colonies because the world’s major source of tin was Cornwall, England, and the English protected its own trade by refusing to export tin. Undaunted, the early American pewter smiths sought out worn and broken pewter objects and melted them down for recasting. This early recycling effort produced most of the American-made pewter prior to the Revolutionary War. Unfortunately, due to the recycling of pewter, fewer than 10 pieces of 17th Century American pewter are known to exist, and less than 100 pieces made prior to 1750 exist today.

Following the Revolutionary War, American pewter smiths were able to obtain tin, but, paradoxically, social customs changed around this time and pottery replaced pewter as tableware. So early American-made pewter is both expensive and hard to find.

For a while, pewter

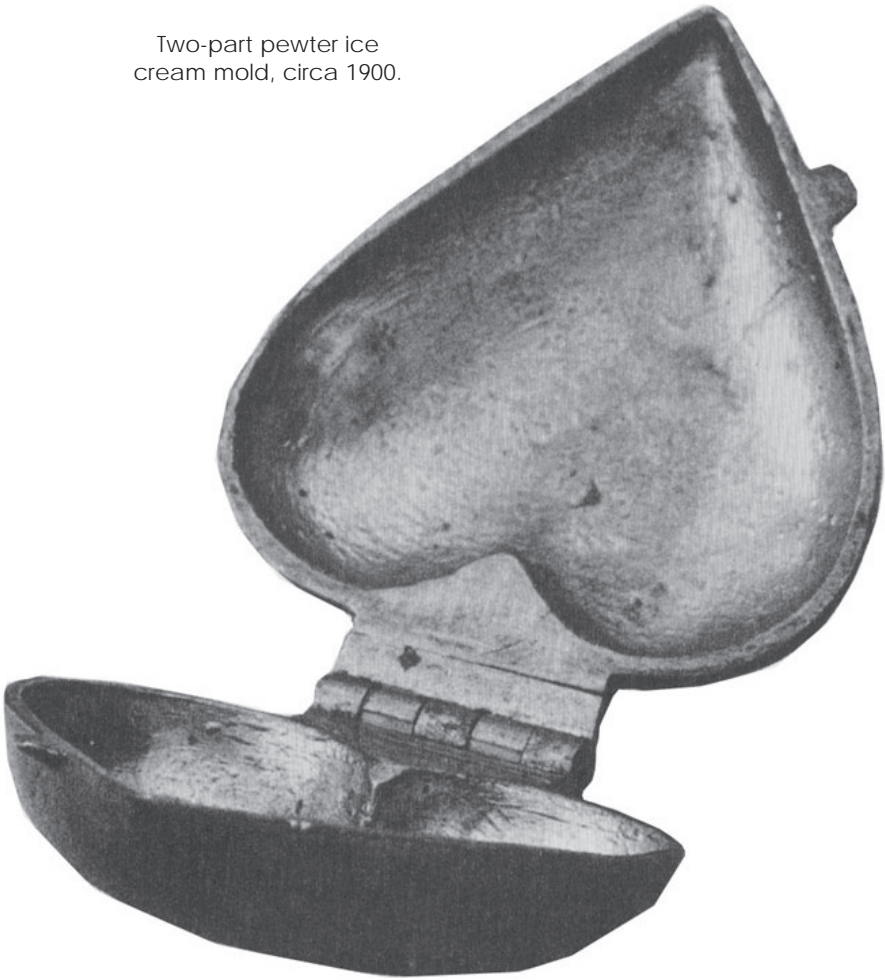

production continued as the base metal in silver-plated objects. Today, much of the pewter found in antique shops is late-19th century pewter pieces that were once silver-plated over a base of pewter but since then have been stripped of their plating.

Evaluation of pewter is quite complicated and, if you desire to collect pewter, you should attempt to become a true expert before risking serious money on inferior items. Two early American smiths to look for are William Will of Philadelphia or Samuel Hamlin of Providence Rhode Island. Also, early English pewter smiths sometimes put an “X” or “London” on pieces made of high quality. And the “rose and crown”—a circular rose capped by a crown became a symbol of high-quality pewter that American smiths also used.

Marks such as those mentioned are easily faked, so beware of buying expensive “old” pewter because fakes and forgeries abound. Many a knowledgeable collector has been misled and added a fake to their collection, and later, when trying to sell it, discovered it is worthless.

Today’s pewter might once again be considered a “poor man’s silver” since it is only decorative for the most part, employing no functional use. Collectible statuettes, figurines, replica coins, and pendants are examples of pewter pieces today. And decorative plates and tankards are quite common on today’s market.

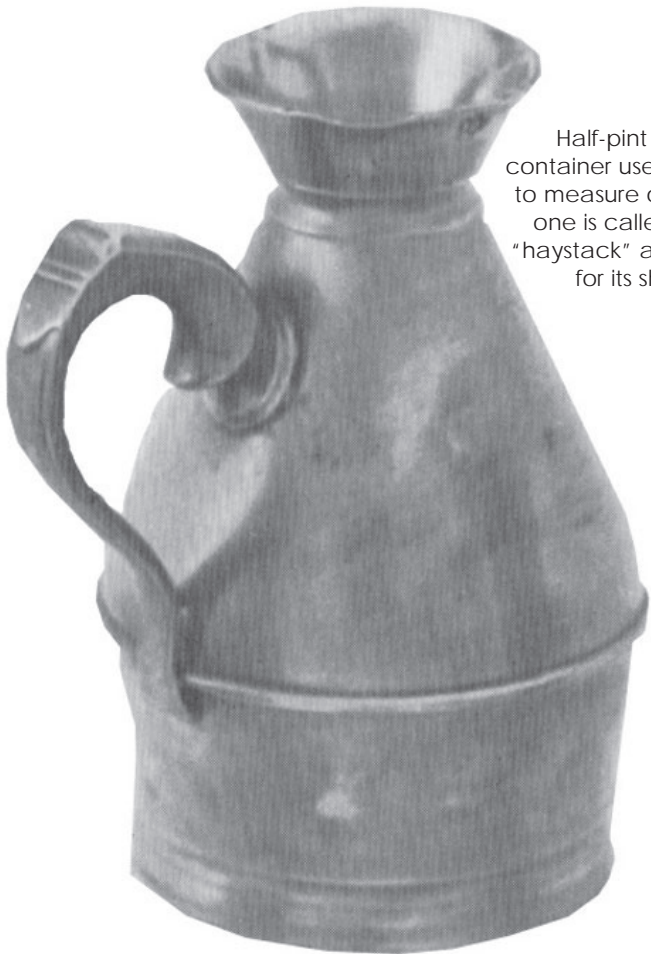

Two-part pewter ice cream mold, circa 1900.

Rare 18th century American pewter porringer, used for both eating and drinking.

Half-pint pewter container used in taverns to measure out ale. This one is called an Irish “haystack” and is prized for its shape.

Ford Mustangs will shine at Gilmore Car Museum show

HICKORY CORNERS, Mich. — Car show season will begin a bit earlier than expected, as the Gilmore Car Museum announced the addition of the David J. Beeke Mustang & Ford Show on Saturday, May 1, to kick off its 2021 event season. The early season car show will feature Ford Mustangs, with special emphasis on 80s/90s Fox-body Mustangs and other Ford vehicles but is open to all classic car makes & models.

The memorial car show will celebrate classic cars and honor the life of passionate car enthusiast David J. Beeke, a Kalamazoo-area Foxbody Mustang restoration expert who sadly was lost to cancer a few years ago. David's family and friends started the annual event as a tribute to him and this year will bring the event – and David's Mustangs – to the Gilmore Car Museum's historic 90-acre campus.

"Bringing a Mustang & Ford Show to the Gilmore Car Museum for our community is exactly the kind of thing that David would have wanted to be a part of," said Matt Sturdy, close friend and co-coordinator of the show. "It will be special to have David's Mustangs there on the grounds, and to have him there with us in spirit."

Attending Beeke family members and friends will assist with car judging and selection for awards, including presentation of the "Beeke Best in Show" award. Food and beverage will be available onsite, as the Gilmore Bar and vintage 1941 George & Sally's Blue Moon Diner will both be open for business. The show will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Showcar/Participant pre-registration is $20, can be handled in advance online at GilmoreCarMuseum.org, and includes admission for two people (driver + guest). Or, registration can be handled on-site on the morning of the event, once the show car gate opens at 8 a.m.

Registration also includes access to all museum indoor buildings and galleries, as well. Ford Mustang fans should be sure to visit the Muscle Car Gallery, to see the spectacular 1969 Ford BOSS 429 KK1663, a new loan to the museum from owner Ken Nagle, and the storied 1967 Shelby GT500 Prototype, on loan from owner Lowell Otter.

Several events are scheduled for the weeks immediately following the David J. Beeke Mustang & Ford Show, including:

- Boats at The Barns on May 8: for classic wooden, fiberglass, and aluminum boats

• Vintage Travel Trailer Rally on May 15: for vintage campers and RVs

• Corks & Crafts Wine and Beer Festival on May 15: for beer and wine enthusiasts

• Vintage Motorcycle Weekend on June 12-13: for pre-1996 motorcycles and scooters

By order of Michigan's governor, all museum visitors age 5 and over are required to wear a face mask in all indoor spaces, and in outside venues at any posted "mask required" areas or any time social distancing of 6 feet cannot be maintained at any area of the museum.

For questions or more information, visit www.GilmoreCarMuseum.org, call (269) 671-5089.

Celebrate money during National Coin Week

Every coin or piece of paper money in your pocket, wallet, or purse has a story to tell about history, and the stories will be celebrated by collectors nationwide during National Coin Week (www.NationalCoinWeek.org), April 18-24.

It is sponsored by the nonprofit American Numismatic Association (www.money.org) to focus attention on "the historical, cultural, artistic and economic importance of money as well as the enjoyment of coin and paper money collecting," according to the National Coin Week coordinator Andy Dickes.

The theme of the 98th

National Coin Week is "Money, Big & BOLD." It was inspired by this year's 100th anniversary of the last time the United States Mint produced two different designs of silver dollars for circulation in the same year, 1921.

Morgan dollars were minted between 1878 and 1921 and are named after their designer, engraver George T. Morgan. Peace dollars struck between 1921 and 1935 are a symbolic representation of hope for peace following the end of World War I. The United States Mint will be striking special 2021-dated versions of the historic Morgan and Peace design silver coins for collectors.

"Over the centuries, the designs, denominations and metallic content of coins can tell us a great deal about civilizations, past, and present, such as famous and not-so-famous political and historical figures, important events and landmarks," explained Dickes. "There's no coin shortage during National Coin Week."

The American Numismatic Association is providing complimentary online educational programs as well as hobby-related games and quizzes for children at www.NationalCoinWeek.org. Between April 18 and 24, new members can join the association at special discount rates of $5 for an online-only membership and $20 to receive the print edition of the Association's award-winning monthly magazine, The Numismatist.

National Coin Week, observed every third week of April, was established in 1924 to attract the general public to the enjoyable hobby of coin collecting.
