ACROSS THE AUCTION BLOCK

Tools and advertising were hot at Chupp/United

BY KARIN MILLIMAN

SHIPSHEWANA, Ind. — Myrna Coleman collected hammers, specifically hammers weighing less than seven pounds. She added them to the collection of her husband, Dan, who collected hand tools. During their 26 years together, they amassed what was thought to be one of the largest hand tool collections in the United States, which included more than 500 hammers.

When Dan died in February, Myrna decided have an auction. Auctioneer Greg Carter with United Auctions of Utica, N.Y., was contacted to take on this huge assignment. This led to a joining with Chupp Auctions in Shipshewana to help with the selling. The sale also included items belonging to Olen and Janie Bentley, who also had some great tools, seed corn advertising pieces, and some pieces that were one-of-a-kind items. Their collection included some really unique cut-out wrenches.

The piece that stole the show was no surprise. A scale model Buick car, all handmade except for the Goodrich Silvertown tires that were purchased for just $4 each in 1921, was a real treasure. This model was displayed in the 1923 Detroit Car Show. It was made by Joe Borromey, who worked in the Buick experimental department in 1921. The exact scale model measure 42 by 16 by 19 inches. The model had no engine and the steering wheel gear was stripped. One brace in the soft top was broken and one engine cover bracket was missing. But it was an amazing piece and when Above: Cut-out wrenches were in demand at this auction and this C & J marked one worked the bidders to $5,800 before it was pronounced sold.

Below: This Minneapolis-Moline sign was an impressive 60 inches long and brought a high bid of $7,750.

Above: Elsie was in working condition in her red gingham dress. The piece sold for $5,500 and stood 70 inches tall.

Key guns could protect a jailer as he unlocked cell

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

There was a time when gun makers and lock makers teamed up to create a weapon that could be used in self defense by jailers.

Key guns were developed so a jailer could lock or unlock a jail door and, if an inmate tried escaping, the jailer could shoot the inmate through the key that he was still holding. For this reason, key guns were chambered for smaller musket balls, such as .32 or .38 calibers. They were made for about 200 years between the 17th and 19th centuries.

Key guns were made when flintlock and percussion cap mechanisms fired guns; however, some key guns were throw backs to earlier times and used matchlock mechanisms that required a cigarette or match to ignite a fuse hanging from a touchhole (they worked basically like lighting a fire cracker). Jailers could not both turn the key and have their finger on the trigger, so matchlock key guns were often preferred.

Key guns were primitive weapons that were not very reliable. For instance, once the key was inserted into a lock and turned, the gun barrel could not quickly be removed from the door lock and aimed at a prisoner, making firing key guns dangerous for the jailer.

A combination of key and gun are rare today, so collectors eagerly watch for them at auction. But pricing these miniature weapons is often difficult. One was offered on the television show Pawn Stars that was said to be from the 1600s and was ultimately valued at $450. But that seems low for a key gun in working condition. However, in August 2020, Pawn Stars purchased a key gun, made in Nuremberg, which was from the 1600s and considered top of the line for such guns. The cost was $5,200 with a possible auction price of $10,000 given. www.icollector.com offered a cast iron matchlock key gun, circa 1600s, at auction in 2014. This gun sold for $1,500.

The difficult part of buying a key gun is the term "working condition." No one in his right mind would shoot a 400-year-old pistol, but, on the other hand, if no one shoots it, no one knows if it is truly in working condition. Most collectors have nothing to worry about since these guns are rare enough that most collectors only see them in their dreams.

Another serious consideration is the material used to manufacture the gun. Some guns were made of cast iron, and many replica guns still are, but a cast iron gun corrodes badly when fired due to acid and common rust.

In 2011, www.thefirearmblog.com showed a black power gun, with touch hole, that was said to be a .32 caliber black powder jailer's key gun from the 1850s. This is possible since the purported date is towards the end of the key gun era. A touch hole gun was dangerous because it did the bidding opened up, the price just kept on climbing. Bids came in very quickly as the in-house and online bidders competed to be the new owner of the prized model car. And the selling price wasn't cheap. You had to have deep pockets to put this car in your collection. The final hammer didn't fall until the price reached a very impressive $18,000 bid.

A red Van Brunt grain drill display measured 36 by 24 inches. Sporting yellow lettering that declared it a John Deere piece, this grain drill box store display was meant to sit on a countertop. It sold for $10,000. A Minneapolis-Moline tractor and farm machinery sign was in very good condition. The bright red letters stood out against the black background. It was surrounded by a wood frame and measured 60 by 36 inches. The final sale price on this advertising collectible was $7,750.

Sticking with the advertising signs, a "Chilled Oliver Plows" sign brought a selling price of $6,000. This one measured 96 by 13 inches. It was sandstone on wood and was in very good condition. It had a new wood frame surrounding it. A second "Chilled & Steel, Walking and Riding Plows" sign measured 48 by 5 inches. It was a single-sided piece and sold for $2,000. And an embossed single-sided Oliver sign measuring 28 by 10 inches sold for $1,600. It was marked "Clarke Hdwre Co., Culpeper, VA" and was in very good condition.

A very different kind of advertising piece was put out by Borden. A mechanical cow standing 70 inches tall was in excellent condition. It was still in working order. She seemed to be right at home in her red gingham dress. She was holding a young cow dressed in blue and white and had a kitchen towel draped over her arm. This display was sold for the bid price of $5,500.

How much would you pay for an old wrench? Seemed the collectors of small hand tools had no bottoms in their pockets when the cut-out wrenches were offered. A C & J cut-out wrench measured a mere 7 inches. This cast iron piece refused to take a back seat as the bidding kept rising quickly when it was offered for sale. The final sale price stopped at $5,800. A Hortu & JR cut-out wrench didn't show any weakness when the bidding was opened up on this French tool. It had raised lettering across the center of the wrench which spelled out the origin of the small 6-inch tool. The price didn't stay small since the bidding reached an impressive $4,250 before it was sold.

A Bradleys Wonder D99 cut out wrench measured 14 inches in length. This cast iron work tool reached a selling price of $1,000. An Ames cutout wrench was a very different looking work tool. This one measured 9 inches and had two heads on one end and one on the other. It brought a final bid price of $1,100. And a John Bull 11-inch cutout wrench held its own with a sale price of $1,000.

There were several tool planes offered for sale. A Stanley Bailey corrugated plane set included all models and the Stanley No. 1. The case measured 32 by 47 by 9 inches and there was a stand to put it on. This store display looked showroom ready, appearing to be right from the salesman that delivered it to the store owner to help sell the Stanley Bailey planes. The hammer didn't come down on this piece of history until the bidders reached a price of $3,400.

A Stanley No. 1 smooth plane was sold for $1,100 as was a Stanley N. 444 tongue and groove plane. A Stanley Bedrock #602 plane came in right behind these with a winning bid of $1,000. And a Stanley No. 212 plane Above: Shown at the 1923 Detroit car show, this model car rode to the top of the chart with its selling price of $18,000.

Above: This Oliver Chilled Plows sign was sandstone on wood and attracted a lot of collectors when it was offered for sale. It reached $6,000.

Above: A model made by Guy Cye, this canoe was a nice display piece that rode the price all the way to $1,200.

was sold for $850.

All these tools had to be contained somewhere and a thirty-drawer machinist chest certainly offered up plenty of options. This vintage piece measured 30 by 54 by 21 inches. It was marked "Hamilton Manufacturing" and had one drawer that had been replaced. The drawer pulls appeared to be all original and the dark patina testified to its age. The bid price to load this unit up was $2,000.

A model of an Old Towne, Maine, canoe was made by Guy Cyr. This one measured 66 inches in length and was one of only four that he made. It sold for $1,200. An Old Towne canoe/sailboat with rudder measured 16 inches long. It had the original rudder and was a sailboat version of the canoe. The seat caning was damaged on this piece but it still sold for $800.

A S.S. Smidley feeder was a salesman sample and measured a mere 4 by 9 by 8 inches. It was marked "Wash, C.H. OH" and was in good condition. Made mostly of wood which had been painted orange, it had a tin roof. The advertising printing was still in great readable condition also. The sale price on this one was $2,100.

For more information call United Auctions at 716-307-3405 or Chupp Auctions at 260-499-0216.

Above: A Stanley Bailey Corrugated Plane set, this piece was a real find as the price rose to $3,400.

Above: This John Deere Van Brunt grain drill display was unusual in that it wasn't green in color. It brought a final bid of $10,000.

After a one-year shut down; Allegan was back in full swing

BY JACK KELLY

ALLEGAN, Mich. — Picture-perfect weather combined with buyers and sellers eager to be back out buying and selling helped create a successful first show of the season for the Allegan Antiques Market on May 30.

“They came to spread their wings,” said promoter Larry Wood as smiling shoppers stood by the gates, ready to enter the fairgrounds for the season-opening show.

Closed for a year because of the Covid pandemic, people were in an upbeat mood while adhering to some restrictions by county and state health officials.

Some folks used the Covid down-time to their advantage. “My wife used the break to get her PhD in antiques,” said dealer Bruce Bunn, pointing to his wife Barbara, who took the full Ashford Institute of Antiques 6-month computer-based study course from their home in Grandville, Mich. The couple filled their booth at the Allegan show with more than 20 antique quilts, priced from $30 to $229, along with assorted sewing items. Two tiny 8-inch-long hand-crank cast metal sewing machines, painted by hand, caught many an eye. They were priced at $65 and $75 each.

Twelve-year veteran Allegan dealer John Bogolin once again traveled 300 miles from Cleveland, Ohio, to set up at the May show and displayed a pair of 1910 Jacobean style geso-based table lamps with hand painted mica shades that could grace your home for $295. Many people checked out his colorful 5-by-7-foot hand-knotted rug made in the Hamadan region of Iran some 60 years ago and priced at $295.

It was a shorter drive to the fairgrounds for Duane Hampsten of The Watch Works in Portage, Mich. The repair and restoration dealer showed off more than 60 timepieces at the show. Many people stopped to admire his 1890s Swiss-made minute-repeater triple calendar 18k gold pocket watch which could keep you on time for $10,000. For home use, a Seth Thomas mantel clock with scarce Aventine-white finish, circa 1910, could grace your home for $225.

Small, highly desirable antiques were among the offerings of 10-year-dealer Dave Pryce of S.D. Pryce Antiques, Grand Rapids, Mich. A 6-inch-long brass wood and steel English black powder tester, circa 1790, could be taken home for $950. At the same spot, a 5-inch-tall 1913 bronze and white metal table-top lighter, shaped like baseball player Honus Wagner, could grace your dresser for $950.

RARE BOOK COLLECTION - JEFFERSON ESTATE

zone Web

TERMS & CONDITIONS: Cash, Checks accepted only with Credit Card information as back up form of payment or Amex, Visa, and Discover are also accepted as a form of payment.

This Book Collection comes from the Estate of Arthur and Rosemary Jefferson. The History and Acquisition is fascinating. Many of the Books are Ex Libris Fred & Maude Black. Fred Black was very close with the Ford Family. He was hired and served as an Executive in Henry Ford's office from 1918-1940. There are numerous articles and accounts on the internet of his many jobs and accomplishments including his instrumental involvement with the acquisition and move of the old Wright Cycle Company Building to Greenfield Village(1936), Overseeing Ford Exhibits at 1933 and 1934 Worlds Fair, and becoming one of the first pilots in Michigan. The book collection was acquired by Arthur Jefferson (Dearborn) who was a close friend of Fred's. The Jefferson family was very involved with preserving the history of Detroit and The Detroit Institute of Arts. The family told us that Fred Black was directly involved and helped acquire Rare Books for the Ford Collection. During this period, Mr. Black was also building a Rare Book Collection himself. See the preliminary photos posted of The Jefferson Library in their Dearborn home where this collection was kept. Many Exciting and Important Books will be available to collectors around the world for the 1st time from this collection. Stay Tuned. Questions and Requests to see any of these books in person should be directed to Joseph Merkel-President Merkel's Auction Specialists, Inc. by calling him directly at 734-320-9828. Thank you for your interest...

Key Gun

not use a wick. One merely touched a hole with a cigar or lighted twig, and the fire's heat and spark traveled down the hole, igniting gun powder. These were the simplest made of all key guns, and it would have been relatively easy to make one of these from primitive cast iron molds.

Some, unusual key guns were made with the lock assembly and nipple for cap inside the key's circular handle. It appears that just a slight amount of palm pressure would ignite this pistol, giving a prisoner a belly-ache if the ball actually hit him.

None of my research revealed whether a key gun was ever actually fired at a prisoner.

Above: Unusual key gun with lock assembly and nipple for cap inside the key's circular handle. It appears that just a slight amount of palm pressure would ignite this pistol.

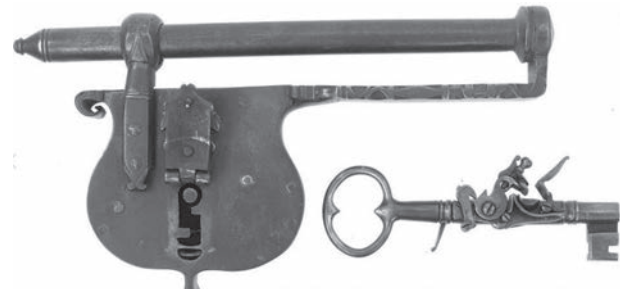

Rare, matchlock cast iron key gun, circa 1600s, that sold at auction for in 2014 for $1,500.

Above: Rare, flintlock key gun, circa 1800s, that was offered at Bramford's Auctions in England.

Above: An unusual 1800s porcelain flange sign from the Allegan show could hang at your place for $750.

filled his booth with antique cast iron kitchenware items priced from $25 up. He offered a no. 2 Griswold early 1900s 6-inch skillet for $1,050, while a no. 50 gem pan was offered for $775.

In some cases, items of local interest found their way to the fairgrounds and were sold at the show. Dealer Cory Johnson offered two large 1920s colorful mint condition advertising sign cloth banners from his grandfather's locally owned Cook Oil Co. service station in downtown Allegan, which closed years ago. The banners, with an illustration of a service station attendant pouring denatured alcohol into a vintage automobile radiator, measured 30 by 50 inches each and sold quickly. They were tagged at $450 each.

Johnson lives in the home of his late grandfather, who started the business Johnson said he discovered the banners in the basement, carefully wrapped in a plastic bag and obviously stored away many years ago.

Still another local connection came with dealer Damon Granger of Traverse City, Mich., who set up at Allegan with wife Angela offering antique advertising signs.

Granger, who hosts the twice –a-year Indoor Indianapolis Advertising Shows, was approached at the Memorial weekend show by an Allegan resident who said his family owned a local hardware store years ago and had two 1950s Winchester guns and ammo new-old-stock tin signs. The resident wondered if Granger was interested in purchasing them. The two met later in the day and made a deal which Granger said, “made both of us happy.”

While Granger completed the deal, advertising sign collectors checked out his unusual triangular 1800s clothing store porcelain 18-by 14-inch advertising sign priced at $750.

As the show ended, Wood said he was “glad to see old friends, both dealers and shoppers, back on the fairgrounds enjoying the day.”

Because of health restrictions some booths were spaced apart more than usual. The Allegan Antiques Market, located midway between Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids, is held the last Sunday of each month during the warm-weather season.

Estate of Kelly McAllister. Kelly was owner of K&M Auctions. He also helped his brother Mike at McAllister Auctions. Kelly was not a so-called “collector”. We said he was an accumulator. He always had stuff, and it was always for sale. His house is full of all manner of nice furniture and collectibles, including the following:

Napanee Kitchen Compact Cupboard, Missions Library table, Ethan Allen coffee tables, end tables, nightstand. Wrought-iron compass tables, mid-century dresser and décor, E. Kornos recliner; Hollywood Stiffel lamps, 3-door oak icebox in excellent condition, metal pipe stand with humidor, Wainscot cupboard, tons of paper goods, advertising pieces, wooden K&M Auction clown, child-size dress mannequin, tons of costume jewelry, neon sign, Orthodox vestment, Raggedy Ann and other collectible dolls, Pyrex bowls, vintage sports equipment, 16’ cargo trailer, 16’ car hauler, copper canister set, 1956 Newspaper Annual Index Book, vintage children’s toys and baby clothes, artwork, vintage Christmas ornaments, vintage photos, vintage flatware, Depression glass, wrought-iron works, and much, much more!!!

TERMS: Cash, check and credit card accepted. Statements made by Auctioneer day of sale take precedence over printed matter. 13% buyer’s surcharge on all sales. Discounted to 10% for payment by cash or check. EVERYTHING SOLD AS IS, WHERE IS.
