Monaghan name added cachet at Yoder auction

By Nancy Kelly

LAKE, Mich. — In 1960, brothers Jim and Tom Monaghan co-founded Domino's pizza when they jointly purchased a small pizza restaurant called DomiNick's. Jim traded his 50 percent share of the young business to his brother in exchange for a used 1959 VW Bug that the company had been using to deliver pizzas. Tom went on to develop (and rename) the company and Jim pursued various jobs and hobbies. He was a machinist, inventor, ham radio enthusiast, steamboat captain, electrician, and more, and that variety of interests was on display at his estate auction. Hosted by Aden Yoder Auction LLC, there was a huge on-site sale with three rings plus an online auction featuring 327 lots that are covered here.

Above: This Postal Telegraph synchronous electric clock required a bid of $400 to take it home.

Some impressive items not often found at an estate sale were offered, including a 1963 Maule M-4 4-seat, fixed wing, single engine aircraft. The 145 hp engine had logged 1,796 hours, and it came complete with service records. Fortunately, this prize sold to an onsite buyer for a final bid of $16,000.

Above: The first battery-powered Domino's Pizza delivery car from 1979 was claimed with a final bid of $10,000.

In his role as inventor, Jim, along with his brother Tom developed the first ever battery powered Domino's Pizza delivery car. This 1979 vehicle was brightly painted with the company logo on the door and was equipped with a bumper charger to allow continuous use. This piece of Domino's history was claimed with a final bid of $10,000.

Fisher-Price radios still playing a merry tune

Vintage, 1969, Fisher-Price pocket radio Music Box that plays "Do-Re-Me" and is valued at $16.

By Larry LeMasters

Fisher-Price, based in Aurora, N.Y., is an American company that produces educational toys for children of all ages. Herman Fisher and Irving Price founded the company in 1930 at the outset of the Great Depression. Fisher had a background in manufacturing, selling, and advertising games. Price had retired from working for a major variety store. The company's toy production principles "centered on intrinsic play value, ingenuity, strong construction, good value for the money, and action," which would motivate children to play with the toy.

In 1931, the founders displayed 16 of their wooden toys at the American International Toy Fair in New York City. Fisher-Price toys became an overnight success, especially its "Dr. Doodle" duck pull toy, which was its first toy sold. Dr. Doodle sold for $1 when new in 1931. Today, a Dr. Doodle pull toy, in excellent to mint condition, is valued in the thousands of dollars.

Following World War II, Fisher-Price, like many companies of the late '40 and '50s, made plastic their standard manufacturing material. Used as a toy material, plastic brought brighter colors and more durability to toys. "Buzzy Bee" was Fisher-Price's first plastic toy (today, a 1950s Queen Buzzy Bee is valued at $25), but by the end of the 1950s, Fisher-Price manufactured dozens of plastic toys and the number increased every year.

In the early 1960s Fisher-Price began manufacturing its celebrated wind-up clock radios, which quickly became recognized as the company's classic "teaching toy." Plastic clock radios also offered. There was a 1929 Ford Model A pickup truck, presented with all original parts and equipment. It also was missing some things, such as the floor inside the cab and the vinyl roof. It was still quite impressive in a maroon color with black running boards and maroon spoked wheels. It was reported to have been running in the last year but was still being sold "as is". It drove off with a final bid of $7,500. Related to this, a Ford Model A bare chassis with no engine or body was claimed with a high bid of $900. A boxy looking 1981 Volkswagen LX Rabbit compact pickup complete with topper presented a different look. This diesel, 2WD vehicle featured 132,500 miles on its manual transmission. Reported to be in drivable condition, it finished with a high bid of $4,500.

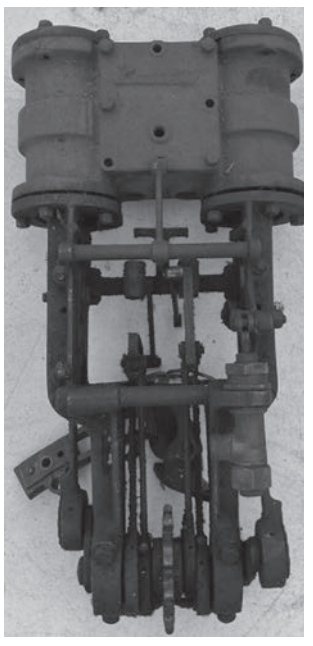
The mechanically inclined Jim Monaghan seemed to enjoy tractors, as evidenced by the numerous models found on the property. The highest-selling example was a Ford A10-12 diesel tractor with front loader. This well-worn work-horse appeared to have good tires and it was hitched to a Sun-Mastr Hammermill mower-shredder. The package drew a final bid of $2,500. An antique Allis-Chalmers narrow front tractor complete with crank finished at $375, an Allis-Chalmers B Row crop tractor closed at $200, and a vintage Speedex Tractor that needed some repair and restoration ended at $225.



Above: This unusual item is a Locomobile steam engine, used to power small cars in 1899. It drew a high bid of $1,775 from an online bidder Engines powered by steam were of particular interest to Jim with numerous fascinating examples present. The largest and most impressive specimen was a Locomobile steam engine, used to power small cars. For a few years, starting in 1899, the company produced these cars before switching over to internal combustion powered automobiles. This handsome specimen sold to an online bidder for the sum of $1,775. Another unusual example was a 24-foot steam engine powered boat complete with trailer and bill of sale. The wooden body was in need of restoration, but the glass panels protecting the cabin were intact and had the appearance of a lighthouse. No claims were made for the steam system, but this fascinating relic drew a final bid of $775. Fellow steam power enthusiasts found many other examples of treasures to take home including a Polson Iron Works steam engine for $425, a Stockton & Sons steam boiler for $250, a small steam engine listed as "incomplete" for $200, and various compression valves, signs, displays, and boilers. Pressure gauges were also plentiful, with the Wickes Brothers pressure gauge drawing the highest bid at $275, and others selling for $15-250.

Several unrelated but useful items were also included in this auction. For example, there was a Chicago bending break made by the Dreis & Krump Manufacturing Company of Chicago. This massive tool was claimed with a high bid of $1,050. A roomy 24 by 25 foot carport with 12 foot sidewalls was structurally sound and ready for its next assignment as soon as the successful high bidder unbolted it from its current mounting. This excellent shelter finished with a high bid of $1,700. Another popular structure offered was a 17 by 24 foot greenhouse. It included a front entry door and an extensive system of shelves. This handy item closed with a final bid of $1,600.

For the brave souls in the group, there was an ultralight aircraft waiting for its next adventure. It is interesting to learn that the single-seat version is only to be used for recreational or sport flying, must not be flown over congested areas, and operators are not required to have any certification or license. This liberating vehicle was claimed with a high bid of $600. For those who prefer their adventures to be more grounded, there was a dune buggy complete with transmission and VW motor that went for $625.

There were so many more useful tools, parts, and items, but one final bit of history resided in the inventory. It was a Postal Telegraph synchronous electric clock 51-15 produced by the Hammond Instrument Company of Chicago. Postal Telegraph & Cable Corporation was a major operator of telegraph networks in the United States and was able to compete with Western Union prior to its consolidation with them in 1943. The correct time could be set manually via a knob or via radio signal. It required a bid of $400 to take it home.

Plenty to do at the ACDF on Labor Day weekend

AUBURN, Ind. — The Auburn Cord Duesenberg Festival returns Labor Day weekend and the Auburn Cord Duesenberg Automobile Museum will offer a host of events.

The annual Garage Cruise will take place on Aug. 29. Take a Sunday drive to visit the garages and shops of local automotive enthusiasts and business owners for a behind-the-scenes look at their automotive projects. The museum will have its Collections & Conservation Center and Collections Storage Facility on the tour.

The ACDAM will also host a free concert outdoors at the Education & Exhibit Plaza on the museum campus on Thursday, Sept. 2. The Sweetwater All Stars will be on the main stage at the plaza located adjacent from the Auburn Cord Duesenberg Automobile Museum.

On Friday, Sept. 3, professional racecar driver, Lyn St. James, will be at the Auburn Cord Duesenberg Automobile Museum in the Gallery of Racers and Record Setters for a meet and greet event. Lyn St. James is a former American race car driver and is the first woman driver to reach over 200 mph on a racetrack. She competed in the IndyCar series, with eleven CART and five Indy Racing League starts to her name. St. James is one of nine women who have qualified for the Indianapolis 500, and became the first woman to win the Indianapolis 500 Rookie of the Year award.

Artifacts on temporary loan from St. James' career from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Museum and The Henry Ford will be on display at the museum during this program and during the ACD Festival.

On Saturday, Sept. 4, the museum will host its annual Connecting Rods Lunch and the annual Gatsby Gala. The Connecting Rods Luncheon is an opportunity to join others from around the globe with a connection to the Auburn Automobile Company. Enjoy lunch with past employees and their relatives for this special event. Museum Curator, Sam Grate, will deliver a special presentation that examines the life of Robert Wiley and the impact of the Export department at the Auburn Automobile Company.

The Gatsby Gala is a 1920s themed evening of dancing, period inspired cocktails, and a live big band.

A complete schedule of Festival events and details can be found at www.acdfestival.org.

Above: After a one year hiatus, the Auburn Cord Duesenberg Festival will return on Labor Day weekend.

had beautiful graphics and allowed children to learn to tell time, becoming a parent's best friend. The "radio" part of this toy played different musical numbers when wound.

One of the earliest and best-loved Fisher-Price clock radios was the #107 "Hickory Dickory Dock" clock radio. When wound, the music box played, "Hickory Dickory Dock The mouse ran up the clock; The clock struck one The mouse ran down; Hickory Dickory Dock." The words for this childhood favorite song were litho printed on the back of each Hickory Dickory Dock clock radio.

Fisher-Price Hickory Dickory Dock clock radios were made of plastic with a red and yellow lithograph clock face and three gray mice playing just outside the clock's face. When the radio's center knob is turned, the music box plays music as revolving pictures of mice sleeping and waking are displayed on the screen. These music boxes came with a hard, yellow plastic handle, for years of abuse, and a spring antenna with a yellow top.

The toy clock on the clock radio had two movable hands, an hour and minute hand. The hour hand moved to the next hour when a child turned the minute hand completely around the clock. Parents loved this clock because it moved just like a real clock, allowing children to quickly grasp the concepts of time movement and telling time.

Fisher-Price's Hickory Dickory Dock clock radio remained basically the same throughout its long production. However, several little variations do exist, making these clock radios a fun and fulfilling collectible item. A few of the variations to look for are the music box mechanism can be either Swiss or Japanese, the bead on the antenna was wood on older music boxes and plastic on the newer ones, and the antenna bead came in different colors, older Hickory Dickory Dock music boxes have a red rim around the clock face cover and new ones do not, and older music boxes have a single arrow line on the music box wind-up and newer music boxes have a double arrow. Collectors look for all these differences and expand their collections by searching for each and every variation to these classic toys

The Fisher-Price Company has created approximately 5,000 different educational toys for children since 1930.

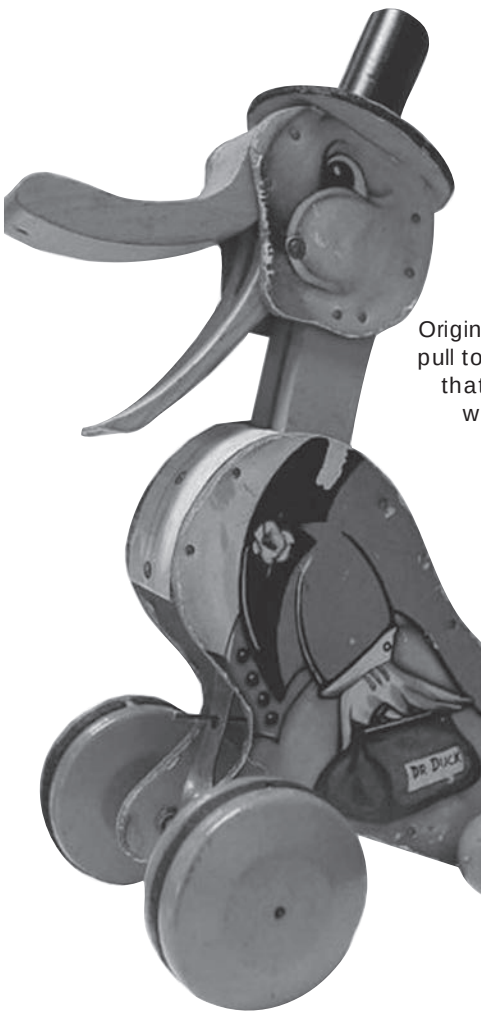
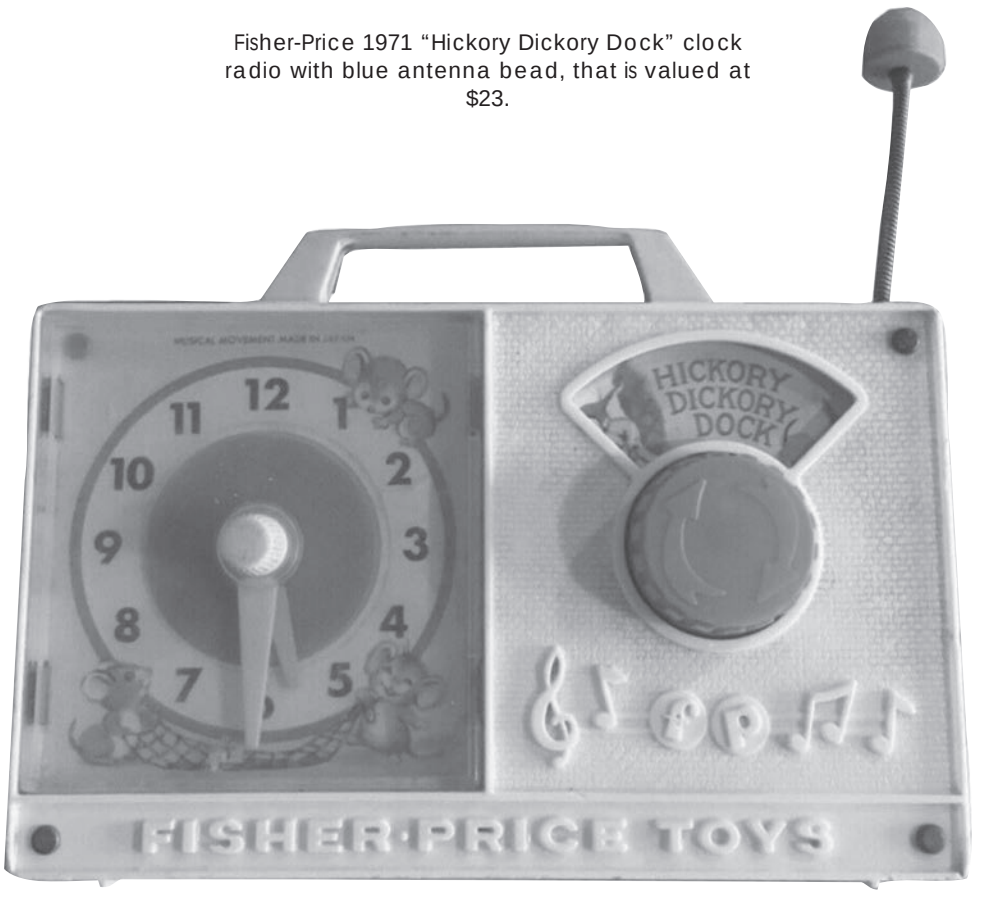
Above: Fisher-Price music box and teaching clock, circa 1968, that is valued at $30.



Original Dr. Doodle pull toy, circa 1931, that sold for $1 when new.



Fisher-Price 1971 "Hickory Dickory Dock" clock radio with blue antenna bead, that is valued at $23.

Petoskey show offers beautiful setting and antiques

PETOSKEY, Mich. — Summers in Michigan's Northern Lower Peninsula can be beautiful. Add a quality antique show and you have the makings of a spectacular destination event. On the first weekends of July and August each year the Petoskey Antiques Show is held at the Emmet County fairgrounds. Overlooking the blue waters of Little Traverse Bay, the fairgrounds offer great views of the bay, and light summer breezes off the expanse of clear waters below.

Attracting dealers from as far as Texas and Colorado, the Petosky show has been an annual gathering point for antiques merchants and collectors for decades. Show promoter Brett Gourdie assembled 140 quality antiques dealers again this season and has set the foundation for the 2022 show. Hinting at possible expansions, Gourdie said is pleased his dealers have handled subtle show changes as well as the past season's Covid response efforts. "The challenges actually allowed us to see new opportunities for future growth." said Gourdie.

Rustic furniture dealers Tim and Gale Colston of Brookville, Ohio, returned to this year's event. Specializing in Rittenhouse and Habitant furniture, the Colston's began this season's August sale with almost immediate sales of a log coffee table and nested stool set. Nearby, under the grandstand, longtime antiques expert Brad Bloom of Kalamazoo tended his intriguing booth of fine antiques and silver.

On the east end of the fairgrounds, near the entrance of one of two large buildings, Lansing, Mich., dealer Jamie Hanks exhibited a super array of Man Cave antiques. Highlighting Hanks' display were items ranging from a metal diving helmet and nautical navigation equipment to a selection of vintage advertising. Further into the building Faye Ignash of Birmingham, Mich., appealed to the feminine side of collecting with a large and well-lit selection of fine and costume jewelry. From Lyons, Mich., Jon and Susan Houserman offered several examples of art glass including Victorian amberina attractively priced from $25 to $75, and a Steuben Celest Blue fingerbowl and underplate set at a reasonable $135.

Returning to the Petoskey for a seventh season, art dealer and researcher Ed Bentley of Greenville, Mich., offered an outstanding collection of fine art. Headlining Bentleys collection was "Mending Nets", an oil on canvas by Mathias Alten. Alten, one of Michigan's premier artists, is highly prized by collectors today and tagged by Bentley at $28,000.

According to Gourdie the 2022 Petoskey Antiques Show has been set for July 2-3 and Aug. 6-7. For more information call (231) 313-4424.

Gold Rush show is back

BY ERIC C. RODENBERG

ROCHESTER, Minn. — The Gold Rush (show) is back, and expectations are high among those with "antiques fever," when this Minnesota town will be bursting at the seams on Aug.20-22.

After 49 years, the Gold Rush has become one of the best (and oldest) antiques show in the country. It has become a special meeting point for many of the top dealers in United States, particularly the "Road Warriors" who spend much of the year traveling from show to show.

However, during the past two years there has been a great lapse in time since these buyers and sellers have been able to get together. Covid-19 closed the two spring shows in 2020 and 2021, with the fall show in August 2020 also falling victim to the pandemic.

The show traditionally has been scheduled for the third weekends of May and August. Due to the capricious nature of the virus and government decisions, show promoters don't get much notice that their show is being cancelled. The Spring show in 2020 was canceled by state government notice on March 20.

"There's not much you can do about it," said Richard Townsend, who owns the show with his wife, Rae. "You just have to move on."

But this year will be different. The indoor/outdoor event at the 52-acre Graham Park, close to downtown Rochester will have 705 dealers under the roofs of eight grand old stone Depression-era buildings. Up to 600 more dealers are expected to set up throughout the spacious park. .

"We're as happy as larks; this year we are rearing to go," Richard Townsend said. "We're getting quite a few calls, asking whether we're still having the show, and I want everyone to know that we have clearance from the State and County."

Masks will be required for all indoor activities at the Gold Rush, per government orders. Outside buyers and sellers will not be required to mask up.

"We'll have dealers coming in from New York to California, Minnesota to Florida. You'll be able to buy anything from five cents to $50,000. We're talking tons of antiques; anything you can think of. We have dealers in the 90s who still drive and get into the show. One 82-year-old lady from Phoenix called a few days ago and said she's on her way … it's exciting to hear from our friends."

"I think we have become a "destination stop," Rae Townsend said. "Lots of people schedule their vacations, or Mayo Clinic (which is in Rochester) appointments around the show. It's a family-oriented environment, and a great chance to show history to children."
