ACROSS THE AUCTION BLOCK

Half-dolls drew steady interest at Pioneer Auctions

BY NANCY KELLY

FENWICK, Mich. — After years of collecting, Lance and Evelyn Bartz decided it was time to downsize. Their online auction was conducted by Jason and Amanda Clark of Pioneer Auctions. The 1,083 lots featured one firearm and some beautiful furniture, including two very large pie safes. But looking at the hundreds of collectibles, it can be safe to assume that it wasn't pies that were kept in those two cabinets. Prices quoted here reflect the hammer price.

The lone firearm was also the highest-selling item of the day. This pre-64 Winchester rifle with lever action was in immaculate condition. It was stamped "Made in New Haven, Conn U.S. of America—Winchester proof steel—Model 94-30 W.C.F." The "pre-64" designation refers to being produced prior to 1964 and featuring a controlled round feed mechanism. The price soared early in the listing and remained there until the end when it closed at $750.

Large furniture items often do not survive the downsizing process and need to be rehomed. The attractive items offered at this sale were eagerly claimed by their new owners. The two pie safes each had a square, rustic look and were made of dark stained pine wood, with two doors and four ample shelves. They stood 52 inches tall and sold for $350 and $325. A square, sturdy-looking curio cabinet that stood 57 inches tall with glass doors and four wood shelves closed at $190, while a taller and narrower curio with glass shelves finished at $101.

The love of wood was evident in the variety of items shown, all in immaculate condition. A sturdy solid oak full size bed with nicely detailed headboard reached a final bid of $400. An exceptionally spacious wood dress-

Tom Mix still rides the range

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

Tom Mix (1880-1940) was Hollywood's first western superstar, and he helped define the western genre as it emerged in the early days of cinema. In all, Mix appeared in 282 silent films and nine sound films. His first and best sound film was "Destry Rides Again," in which Andy Devine played Destry's sidekick.

Mix grew up in DuBois, Pa., where his father, a stable master for a wealthy lumber merchant, taught him to ride and love horses. As a young man, he worked as a cattle wrangler for the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch in Oklahoma. The ranch had its own touring Wild West Show in which Mix appeared. He stood out as a skilled horseman and expert shot, winning national riding and roping contests at Prescott, Ariz., in 1909, and Canon City, Colo., in 1910.

Mix joined the US Army in April 1898, at the height of the Spanish-American War. His unit never went to Cuba, so he saw no combat. Mix was given an extended furlough in 1902 to marry Grace Allin. Mix did not return to his Army unit and was listed as AWOL on Nov. 4, 1902. He never returned to the Army, and he was never charged or court-martialed for desertion. This is, perhaps, the only black mark on his illustrious and er with two handkerchief boxes on top drew a final bid of $250. The handsome round oak dining table featured a polished finish and carved feet. It measured 48 inches and expanded to 68 inches with two extensions. This beauty found a new home with a high bid of $250. An unusual sidewinder oak dresser consisted of one side built up with extra storage compartments while the other side supported a tall, narrow mirror. This eye-catching piece drew a final bid of $150. A vintage washstand displaying a mirror housed in a lyre-style frame finished at $120, while a wider oak stand without a mirror but with three drawers and carved trim closed at $140. An ornate 62-inch-long wood pew, complete with arm rests, left with a final bid of $150.

Many useful household items were offered, but it was the downsizing of the collectibles that truly made this auction unique. Two hundred of the auction lots featured “half dolls.” These interesting characters from the early 20th century consisted of just the upper half of a person, usually female. They were produced in porcelain, without legs so they could be attached to something useful, such as pin cushions, powder boxes, whisk brooms, or other things that would be enhanced by this decoration. Prices ranged widely depending on the design of the doll, if a known company produced it, and if it was outfitted with the rest of the body. One of the most popular items was the flapper, complete with gold satin dress, gold shoes, jewelry, and make up. She cleared a final bid of $350. A group of four half dolls combined models by Goebel and Dressel & Kister. One of the ladies in the group had a full-length pink lace fabric gown and the other three were in appealing poses. This lot closed at $350. Another group produced by Dressel & Kister included a medieval half doll along with three others who were all full-body models. The tallest in the group stood 8 inches, two wore fabric dresses and two were molded porcelain. This group drew a final bid of $275. A lot consisting of numerous sets of porcelain legs finished at $200, a half doll 18-inch-tall lamp consisting of a woman standing under a fabric canopy closed at $101, and dozens of lots with single or multiple half dolls finished in the $3-40 range.

Ceramic or chalkware string holders were made to look like the faces of people or animals with the string coming out of their mouth. Some were wall mounted while others rested on a counter-top. Due to their fragile nature, they often have chips or cracks, but this collection was in excellent condition. Several in this sale depicted African Americans, often in outfits or poses that can be disturbing to some people. The highest selling example was of a black woman wearing a green head scarf and a broad smile with the string coming out of her teeth. It took a final bid of $130 to claim her. A full body Aunt Jemima string holder in her familiar outfit left with a high bid of $66, and a black clown head finished at $55.

Thirty-four head vases made up yet another collection. These models of women’s heads dressed in various styles and poses had openings at the top for a small plant. The top selling example here was a blonde woman wearing a hooded jacket and white turtleneck sweater. She measured 7 inches tall and was marked “Rubens Originals © Los Angeles Made in Japan”. This pretty piece went for $62. Her style was much more modern than the rest of the examples which closed between $3-38.

A limited number of characters from the Walt Disney Classics Collection (WDCC) series were present. The Fantasia 5-inch-tall figure “Mischievous Apprentice” won the top bid at $87. A 1997 Walt Disney Collectors Society members-only sculpture showing 8-inch-tall Goofy strolling along with holes in his shoes topped out at $61, a 1996 Tinkerbell ornament and stand left for $53, and other pieces sold in the $40-50 range.

Finally, Pioneer Auctions offered an interesting twist to the auction. The final lot of the sale was labeled “All In” and consisted of all the lots that did not obtain a bid during the auction. This mystery grab bag included lamps, plastic plates, board games, car mats, toy race cars, collectible plates, blinds, and even a vintage clock radio. It was claimed with a $10 bid.

Pioneer Auction Service is based in Alma, Mich. Information on future auctions and other services can be found at <http://pioneerauctionservice.com>.

Tom Mix

his horse Trigger, Mix was riding through Hollywood's back lots on Tony, the Wonder Horse, making millions of American children want to grow up to be cowboys. Early in his movie career, Mix was dubbed "King of the Cowboys," which he respectfully tried to live up to his entire life.

Tom Mix made personal appearances all over the country, rivaling the travel and appearances of famed western comic, Will Rogers. In 1905, Mix rode in President Theodore Roosevelt's inaugural parade, and in 1929 Mix was a pallbearer at the funeral of Wyatt Earp, famed frontier lawman.

Local newspapers reported, "Movie star Tom Mix cried during Earp's service."

Mix began his film career as a supporting actor in the Selig Polyscope Company's "The Cowboy Millionaire," which was released in October 1909. Selig Polyscope Company filmed more than 100 of Mix's western films on location in Las Vegas.

Mix soon moved into movie stardom, reportedly earning as much as $7,500 a week. And in 1929-31, he appeared with the Sells-Floto Circus at a reported weekly salary of $20,000 (equivalent to $301,000 in 2020). In 1935, Mix reportedly bought the Sam B. Dill Circus, which he had appeared with for the previous few years.

Tom Mix's last screen appearance was as star of a 15-episode sound Mascot Pictures serial, The Miracle Rider (1935). He reportedly, in the middle of the Great Depression, earned $40,000 for four weeks of filming.

In 1933, Ralston Purina produced the Tom Mix Ralston Straight Shooters radio series, which was popular through the early 1950s, over a decade after Mix's death. The Ralston Purina Company offered ads during the radio program for listeners to write in for a series of 12 special Ralston/Tom Mix comic books available only by writing the Ralston Purina Company by mail. Today, this series of comic books are eagerly Mix also had a long and colorful career in other comic books. The Golden Age of Western-themed comics was the 1940s - '50s, during which time Mix's heroic western deeds were well established. Fawcett Comics published a total of 61 Tom Mix Western comics from 1948 – 1953. And L. Miller & Son’s published 85 issues of Tom Mix Western Comics from 1948 – 1951.

Mix singlehandedly built Hollywood’s western genre movies, but perhaps his greatest film legacy is Marion Morrison. Morrison had a career ending injury while playing football for the University of Southern California. Mix took Morrison under his wing and found work for him moving props on the western sets of Fox Studios. Morrison caught the acting bug, changed his name to John Wayne, and became America’s greatest western movie star of all time. And he owed his career to Tom Mix.

Tom Mix died, at age 60, on Oct. 12, 1940, when his car overturned on Arizona State Route 79, near Florence, Ariz. A small stone memorial marks the location of his death. The marker bears the inscription, “In memory of Tom Mix, whose spirit left his body on this spot and whose characterization and portrayals in life served to better fix memories of the old West in the minds of living men.”

Today, Mix still rides the ranges in western collections across America. In one way or another, every western movie ever shot owes something to Tom Mix and his indelible mark he left on Hollywood’s western landscape.
