ACROSS THE AUCTION BLOCK

High chest brings $17,000 at Garth's

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Garth's Auctioneers & Appraisers of Columbus, Ohio, continues to utilize the online only selling option that got auction houses through the pandemic. Actually, online auctions thrived and continue to do so as the results of this two-day March event that closed on March 26 and 27 once again indicate.

The March 26 sale featured the 60 year Americana collection of Norma Avery of Pennsylvania and New Mexico, while the March 27 auction was comprised of Americana featuring the 50-plus year personal collection of AnnaMary and Richard York of Lincoln, Nebraska, as well as items from a 60 year collection of a woman from Florida.

Fine and painted furniture was in abundance with the top lot of both auctions being – surprisingly; a piece of “brown furniture;” but what a beauty. Up for grabs was a mid-18th century cherry with yellow pine as its secondary wood, American Queen Anne high chest. Made up of two pieces with pegged construction, this example had a flat top and pad feet. It sold for $17,000. Prices do not include the buyer's premium.

Major selling points of this chest – a) its original finish in exceptional condition; b) it retained its original brasses, and c) all rosehead nails were used in its construction. Then there was the dove-tailed drawers and dove-tailed top with a carved fan. The case interior retained chalked drawer numbers. The base had an upper dust shelf and a carved fan on the bottom center drawer all supported on cabriole legs and scrolled returns. The piece stood an impressive 79½ inches tall.

Vintage Mother's Day cards make the perfect gift

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

While there is no “heyday” for greeting cards, in general, the 1950s come close. Following World War II, people wanted to keep in touch with loved ones and friends, so greeting card sales hit all time highs. Approximately 240 million Mother's Day greeting cards were sold in 1959 alone, making 1959 the greatest year for Mother's Day cards ever.

Out of that 240 million cards, scholars report 85 percent were traditional “We love you, Mom”-type of cards, but 15 percent, which is a staggering 36 million, were slam-type cards designed to insult Mom more than cherish her.

Hallmark has been a mainstay of Mother's Day cards. Three brothers (Joyce, William, and Rollie Hall) started the Norfolk Post Card Company in 1907 in Norfolk, NE. In 1910, Joyce Hall moved the postcard business to Kansas City, MO. By 1922 the company had expanded throughout America, and in 1928, the brothers introduced a name that has become a leader in greeting cards — Hallmark. And, in 1944, during the turning point of World War II, Hallmark introduced the slogan that is still famous today, “When you care enough to send the very best.” And for years collectors have searched for Hallmark Mother's Day cards as the very best cards to collect.

Mother's Day cards originated as post-sink did well bringing $2,800 against an estimate of $300 to $600. Having an applied lid around the well, a single, two-panel door, and cut-out feet, this one was a cutie. Pegged and square nail construction and faux-tiger maple paint decoration rounded out its charm.

Another smaller piece at 39 ½ inches high; this being an American bucket bench made of pine with four shelves, shaped ends with cut-out legs all wearing traces of its original red paint sold for $2,400.

Small seemed to appeal to shoppers during this day as an American table top apothecary only 17 ¼ inches high, having wire nail construction, and wearing its original blue paint realized $7,500. It boasted 15 nailed drawers with beveled fronts and original porcelain knobs.

Then there was the stunning Compass Artist dometop box hailing from Lancaster County, Pa., which sold for $6,250. Measuring 4 ¾ inches high by 5 ¾ inches wide and 4 inches deep, this box wore robin egg blue paint with a red and white compass star decoration.

Other decorative items selling strong included an American domed butterprint with a peg handle featuring a chip carved tulip and heart that sold for $3,300, while a Prior Hamblin School oil on canvas portrait of a young boy made $4,500. The portrait showed a lad dressed in a double breasted blue jacket.

The second day of this auction found the strong sales continuing with an interest again in furniture and decorative items. Attributed to Lehigh County, Pa., an American two-piece corner cupboard was strongly vied for ending in the winning bidder paying $4,100. Made of cherry with poplar as its secondary wood, this cupboard had a cove molded cornice, a twelve-pane door, and a base with three drawers wearing beaded edges over two single-panel doors. The cupboard stood 91 inches high.

Coming in as the top lot for day two was the Ohio jeweler's trade sign crafted of carved wood in the form of a pocket watch which then hung from a cast iron hanger. Double-sided and wearing layers of gilding and gold paint as well as the words "J. Rickesecker" on one side and "J. Rictsector" on the other side, this sign sold for $8,000.

Ceramic Arts Studio collectors meet Aug. 27

MADISON, Wis. — CAS Collectors, the club for all those with an interest in the work of Ceramic Arts Studio, will hold its convention Aug. 27 in Madison. The theme, "Seasons Of CAS!" celebrates the ageless appeal of Ceramic Arts figurines, an appreciation that's spanned the seasons since the Studio first opened its doors in 1940. CAS charmers brightened homes from coast to coast during the 1940s and '50s, brighten hearts today, and will continue to brighten collectors' hearts for decades to come!

From 9 am to 3:30 pm on Aug. 27, Convention attendees will take in the Wisconsin Pottery Association Show & Sale at the Alliant Energy Center. Later, all will gather at a new locale, the Madison Comfort Inn and Suites, for the Convention festivities. Activities and décor will pay tribute to the Studio's illustrious heritage.

Getting the evening underway will be a social hour, and the popular "CAS On Display Contest"; all in attendance are invited to submit entries. A plated dinner, raffle, and membership meeting will be followed by the club's annual auction. Events will conclude with door prizes, and presentation of the 2022 CAS Collectors Commemorative.

Convention registration, which remains at $60 per person, includes all evening activities, plus the Commemorative. Registrations will be accepted up until two weeks prior to the event. Forms and full information are available on the club's website, www.cascollectors.com

Industrial designers helped bring Art Deco into homes

BY DONALD-BRIAN JOHNSON

Often, how we view the past is dependent on what's available for viewing today. We see Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers click-clacking their way through a 1930s movie musical. He's in a sleek black tuxedo. She's in flowing white satin. There's a gleaming black dance floor, framed by white draperies. The movie itself, as you may have guessed, is also in black and white. The cinematography captures both the darkest and brightest elements of each extreme. And there it is: tangible evidence of a world where everything is black and white. And we say to ourselves, "well, that's Art Deco."

Except that it isn't, or at least it isn't all the time. Although black and white were important elements, the Art Deco era was also alive with a riot of color. Designers and decorators offered up a unique blend of the traditions of the past (such as the recently departed, softer-edged Art Nouveau), with the "streamlined" design innovations of the present (the last years of the Roaring '20s, through the Depression-bound days of the 1930s). Opposite poles of the visual spectrum collided, propelled by an explosion of artistic energy. That's why Art Deco design is so satisfying, and has such longevity. It

Above and below Right: Unusual Hallmark Mother's Day storybook greeting card, circa 1930s, that is actually a small book. It was offered on eBay for just $12.

cards. By the outbreak of World War I, the postcard craze in America was over, but early postcards from this era are eagerly sought after, ranging in price from $8 to $40 each. By 1920, Hallmark and many other greeting card companies were selling Mother's Day cards, and the holiday, as we know it, was booming.

Today, most collectors search for conventional Mother's Day cards that express joyous celebration of mothers and motherhood. There are many sub-categories of Mother's Day cards that collectors search for, such as husband to wife cards. Some collectors specialize in collecting "sour" or "insulting" Mother's Day cards, but this is a small minority of the collectors who cherish Mother's Day cards.

Greeting card experts express that Mother's Day cards over the years have evolved into less ornate cards; although, they still express the same sentiments. Collectors recognize modern Mother's Day cards express more sincere messages than the cutesy, childish cards of the 1950s, but it is the cutesy cards that collectors desire.

Vintage Mother's Day cards are, for the most part, inexpensive, and they make brightly colored, amazing decorations when framed.

Art Deco

offers, quite literally, something for everyone.

A case in point: Art Deco items for the home. While some serve a purely decorative function, the majority incorporate usefulness into their art. That's because manufacturers were faced with a Depression-based dilemma: bowls, plates, coffee-pots, vases, and other home accessories had been around for ages. What could possibly persuade buyers in a depressed economy to purchase new items, when older ones were still performing reasonably well? The answer was to promote the new as "improved" versions of the old, efficiently addressing the three concerns of primary importance to consumers: usefulness, cost and appearance. That task fell to a Deco-spawned new breed: the industrial designer.

Generally contracted as free agents, these wonder-workers were sought after by companies which turned out products as diverse as washing machines, automobiles, porch furniture, and refrigerators. The talent of the industrial designer was an uncanny ability to modernize the mundane—and to do so without compromising form or function.

Leading the industrial design pack was the Chase Brass & Copper Co. From 1933 to 1942, Chase turned out a gleaming (and seemingly endless), array of buffet service articles, drinking and smoking accessories, lamps, and assorted home décor items. Fashioned primarily of brass, copper, or the newly popular chromium, these "Chase Specialties" were truly what etiquette expert Emily Post (on the Chase payroll as "design advisor") praised as "the answer to the housewife's prayer." They provided a look of elegance, they were easy to care for, and, best of all, they were available at prices Depression buyers could afford. "It's smart to be informal," said Post, "and Chase makes informality smart!"

While Chase advertisements stressed that the company's metal giftwares were "not meant to compete with solid silver," they of course did. In the opinion of many housewives, Chase was clearly the winner. In homes without squadrons of servants, there was little time (or inclination) to polish up the family silver before and after each dinner party. With Chase, all it took was a quick wipe with a soapy cloth, then a quick rub with a dry one, and a chrome canapé plate was once more bright and shiny. More importantly, at $7.20 per dozen, the appeal of chrome canapé plates over solid silver ones was immediately obvious.

Rather than relying on just one or two designers for its output, Chase offered design assignments to many; at least 21 are known to have made contributions to the line. Some, like Director of Design Harry Layton, his predecessor Helen Bishop Dennis, and Development Engineer Howard Reichenbach, were on the Chase payroll full-time. Others, such as Walter Von Nessen, Ruth and William Gerth, Lurelle Guild, Russel Wright, Rockwell Kent, and Dr. Albert Reimann, were given freelance contracts to create specific pieces. Their work demonstrated resoundingly that functional objects could also be attractive to the eye.

In 1936, Walter Von Nessen told House Beautiful that "a designer today must be an inventor too"—and the designing minds at Chase were definitely inventive. Since other Chase divisions focused on the company's more mundane tasks — producing such everyday necessities as plumbing pipe and electrical parts — discarded shells, elbow joints, and the like soon found their way to the Chase storeroom. It took an industrial designer to see the artistic possibilities inherent in these odds and ends. Efficient re-use of unlikely components by the giftware division proved a cost-effective means of fighting the Depression. A simple toilet floater, for instance, served as the focal point for a variety of products, including a "Syrup Jug." Brass bedstead balls found new life as Russel Wright-designed salt and pepper spheres. And Walter Von Nessen's "Diplomat Coffee Set," recipient of an "Award of Merit" from the National Alliance of Art and Industry, began life as extruded chromium plated pipe!

Industrial designers were, of course, much more than Deco Dr. Frankensteins, cobbling together spare parts in hopes of coming up with something marketable. Their task was to reinterpret standard household items in ways that would increase attractiveness, convenience and marketability. As Russel Wright told Design magazine in 1933, "the designer can take a dull product lacking in sales appeal, and with the magic touch of artistic imagination vamp it into an exciting product packed with sales appeal."

Adding additional charm to Art Deco homes were those objects created primarily (if not necessarily solely), for decorative purposes. Certainly, a Robj decanter or a Schneider vase performs a function—but so could a moonshine jug, or a jelly jar, and much less prettily. Enhancing the beauty of a specific home environment was their reason for being. That they could also actually prove useful was merely a pleasant side benefit. Many were "statement" pieces, purchased as gifts to mark an important occasion, such as an anniversary or a wedding.

Porcelain, glass, and metal decorative objects of the period highlight the ways in which old and new could co-exist—and co-exist they did. The dawn of Art Deco never resulted in a wholesale junking of all that came before. During the 1920s and '30s, the majority of American homes combined the familiar with the futuristic, an amalgam specifically suited to the needs and desires of the individual householder.

That analysis is borne out by the colorful interior illustrations which punctuated advertisements of the era. Glamour art sold the product, placing each featured item in an idyllic locale. If you're hawking something as mundane as a "Herman Nelson Invisible Radiator," for instance, why not star it in an illustration so enticing that the radiator itself becomes. . .well. . .invisible?

Today, prices for Art Deco accessories can range from the low hundreds for a mass-produced Chase cocktail set, into the thousands for an exquisite Schneider vase. Regardless of choice, a happy fusion of old and new awaits you, just as it awaited aspiring decorators of the 1920s and '30s. In the Art Deco home, past and present combine. The result? An invigorating, visually stunning future.

Donald-Brian Johnson (text) and Leslie Piña (photos), are the co-authors of numerous

Schiffer books on art and design, including "Deco Décor," and a four-volume study of the Chase Brass & Copper Co. Please address inquiries to: donaldbrian@msn.com

Below: Guess what this ad is for: not lingerie. . .not coffee sets. . .and not love-seats. Instead, it promotes the "Herman Nelson Invisible Radiator": "the radiator that says 'this home is modern'." House Beautiful, May, 1930.
