2013 Tesla electrified the crowd selling for $33,831

WAYLAND, Mich. — Miedema's Repocast, with three facilities in Michigan, is a very busy service, conducting auctions to disperse a wide range of items including agricultural equipment, cars, semi-trucks, trailers, industrial machinery, construction equipment, restaurant equipment, and municipality dispersals. They specialize in online sales that are hosted on their own bidding platform, and the format is well organized and informative. This particular sale was an especially appealing one as it featured 42 classic cars that were in great condition and proved to be very popular with the bidders. Prices here do not include the buyer's premium.

The star vehicle was not vintage, but rather a

2013 Tesla Model S. This P85+ edition luxury electric sedan came with a lifetime free Supercharging and App registration. Equipped with a 240 volt single phase charger and 120 volt charger adapter, it was ready to roll. Other modern features included the panoramic sunroof, power tilt and telescoping steering column, Brembo brakes, a large touch-screen control panel, power windows, locks, and mirrors, cruise control, keyless entry, privacy glass, traction control, back up camera, and a navigation system. EPA specs say that the car is capable of a driving range of 271 miles (before requiring a battery recharge) and speeds up to 130 mph. This package finished with a final bid of $33,831.

There were some attractive sporty options that proved desirable. The red 1969 Chevrolet Corvette Stingray convertible was offered with

Ben-Hur coffee still gallops into hearts of collectors

BY LARRY
LEMASTERS

Following the success of the silent movie Ben-Hur in 1925, the Adams-Henry Company, dealers in coffees, teas and spices, decided the world needed a Ben-Hur brand of coffee.

G. H. Ballou founded G. H. Ballou & Company in 1889 to supply coffee to local groceries in San Diego, Calif. Later, Arthur Cosgrove joined Ballou's company. When Cosgrove retired in 1906, Ballou & Cosgrove was shipping coffee, spices, and other grocery commodities throughout America and to Asia. In 1912, Albert E. Adams and William Henry formed the Adams-Henry Company and successfully purchased G. H. Ballou & Company. And in 1913, Adams-Henry founded the first coffee company in San Diego, Sun Coffee ("Cups of Sunshine").

By 1927 the Adams-Henry Company sold Sun Coffee in more than 500 local stores in southern California. When interviewed about the company's success, William Henry supposedly attributed the company's rapid expansion to its motto: "Dependable years ago, dependable now."

In 1925 Sun Coffee offered the public a new brand of coffee—Ben-Hur Coffee, which came in regular and "Drip." Ben-Hur Coffee packaging and advertising came complete with the company's logo of a chariot and four charging horses, which symbolized the famous chariot race in the movie.

The Sun Coffee Company distributed both the locally famous Ben-Hur

Coffee and the Ben-Hur brand of teas and spices, including Ben-Hur Thyme, Allspice, and Cina 350 V8 engine, 4 speed manual transmission, and manual convertible top. With leather and cloth seats, AM/FM radio and only 93,395 miles, this car was ready for summer cruising. It drove off the lot with a final bid of $25,050. There was also a white 1979 Chevrolet Corvette L-82 equipped differently with an automatic transmission, power windows and locks, cruise control, privacy glass, tilt steering, and a vastly upgraded after-market audio system. Ten years newer than the previous Corvette, this beauty earned a final bid of $7,125.

Some eye-catching truck options drew their own audience. For those who enjoy special features, there was an impressive orange and tan 1984 Chevrolet K10 4 x 4 drivetrain custom deluxe. This 8-cylinder automatic transmission vehicle had numerous parts replaced, upgraded, or customized including the audio system, custom steering wheel and column, floor shifter, body, trim and glass enhancements, and most engine parts. With only 61,137 miles on the odometer, it was ready for a new, appreciative owner who claimed it with a final bid of $18,600. Next, a massive, half-ton white 1947 Ford Pickup featuring a flathead V8 engine, 3 speed manual transmission, a waterfall grille design, and a wooden floor bed offered a different option. It ran and drove fine but had some cosmetic damage and needed some minor repairs. It still looked amazing and cleared a final bid of $13,000. Other similar vehicles included the 1992 Land Rover Defender 4 x 4 with 5-speed manual transmission in good condition but showing some rust that left for $22,875, a two-tone blue 1986 Chevrolet C10 Silverado pickup sporting a 5.0L V8 gas engine, automatic transmission, power steering, RWD, and cruise control that topped out at $10,375, and a red 2006 Jeep Wrangler SE with 6-speed manual transmission, 4 x 4 drivetrain, mesh bikini top, 31inch tires on alloy wheels, and Hella lights on the front bumper. The Jeep showed some cosmetic damage and an odometer reading of 140,696, but still drew a final bid of $6,075.

Then there was the cluster of handsome cars that looked like they belonged in an automotive museum. Leading this pack was the sleek black 1969 Chevrolet Chevelle SS 396 with a Chevy 396 big block V8 engine, 4 speed manual transmission, and vinyl seats that showed some cosmetic flaws and was reported to need the brakes repaired. Despite that, it still commanded a final bid of $23,875. Not far behind was a candy apple red 1964 Buick Riviera with a Wildcat 465 425-cubic inch V-8 gas engine, automatic transmission, air conditioning, power steering, power brakes, and lots of chrome. This two-door beauty from another era was claimed with a final bid of $17,025. A very cool white 1963 Oldsmobile Cutlass F85 Convertible body was given a new lease on life with a 1994 Firebird 3800 V6 engine and transmission swap. Reported to be a very solid car that was only driven on weekends, it finished at $9,055. Other unusual vintage rides included the silver 1962 Rolls Royce Silver Cloud II 4 Door Saloon that closed at $9,915, the 1962 V8 Ford Thunderbird that finished at $10,525, and a fascinating white 1953 Jaguar Mark VII that looked like it came out of an old movie. It was reported to need towing to remove from the lot but still managed to close at $3,525.

An unusual find which drew much attention was the red 2005 Chevrolet SSR. Only 7,279 were built and of those only 1,629 were painted red. It featured a 6.0 V8 gas engine, automatic transmission, power convertible hardtop, hard tonneau cover, and was in overall good clean condition. Due to the limited production of this modern pickup truck with a vintage appearance, it required a final bid of $22,575 to take it home.

Due to the fickle winds of consumer change, Ben-Hur Coffee silently disappeared from grocery shelves in the 1950s as coffee drinkers developed a taste for national brands of coffee such as Hills Brothers and Chase & Sanborn coffees.

Today, collectors search for Ben-Hur coffee jars, coffee tins, coffee pots, advertising signs, and spice tins. One interesting piece of Ben-Hur Coffee history is the Ben-Hur Metlox ashtray that was given away as a promotional item at the San Diego Pacific International Expo in 1935. If you're a collector, this piece is worth searching for.

Felt pennants were the perfect baseball souvenir

BY DOUG GRAVES

Souvenirs have always been popular at sporting events. Many a fan has purchased a pennant from their favorite team to adorn a wall.

“One of the first souvenirs sold at the ballparks in the early 1900s, the pennant is fittingly the first souvenir purchased for young fans attending their first ball game,” said Steven Keyman, founder of keymancollectibles.com. He has 35 years of experience in researching and cataloging information pertaining to baseball memorabilia. “It’s no wonder that pennants were a favorite among kids. Just about every kid that brought home a pennant quickly tacked it up on their bedroom wall. I know I did.”

“The first pennants to commemorate a World Championship appeared around 1914,” Keyman says. Because many pennants did not contain a year, collectors may have to guess in terms of dating them.

“Vintage pennants are difficult to date to a specific season,” Keyman says. “Many pennants were for sale at the ballparks for several years consecutively. Team logos and artwork could help in dating. Often teams will use the same artwork on other souvenirs like programs and yearbooks, making it possible to date to a specific season.”

According to Keyman, “roster pennants” are very popular among pennant collectors because they included the listing of players on that team. Pennants that bore such names as Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Yogi Berra, Phil Rizzuto, Bob Lemon, Jackie Robinson, Stan Musial, Duke Snider, Warren Spahn or other Hall of Famers will increase the value of that pennant greatly.

The interest in pennants remained steady and interest surged even further when the Detroit Tiger organization released its team photo pennant of its 1968 American League Champions. This style of photo pennant was used as a stadium souvenir by a number of teams from the 1960s to the mid-1970s.

Pennants that commemorate special events or player milestones are highly sought after. In 1963, the St. Louis Cardinals honored shortstop stand-out Stan “The Man” Musial with a pennant honoring his career (1941-1963) with the Cardinal organization. In the 1930s, players like Babe Ruth, Mel Ott, Bob Feller and Billy Herman were honored on pennants as well.

After announcing his retirement from baseball in March of 1969, the New York Yankees honored Mickey Mantle with a special pennant on June 8, 1969. That same day the Yankees retired the number 7, never again to be worn by any Yankees player. In addition to pennants, Mantle buttons and programs were sold that day, but the pennant was the hot seller.

According to Ryan Crawford, former operator of Baseball Card Treasures in Erlanger, Kentucky, felt baseball pennants became popular novelties thanks to two cultural changes: the proliferation of colleges and universities, and the popularity of football. The changes, he says, combined to create an environment where the felt pennant was bound for success.

“Throughout the 18th century, the American collegiate landscape was dominated by the Ivy League schools,” he said, “and by the latter half of the 19th century the barriers to these higher education institutions were steadily eroded by the infiltration of catholic schools, women’s schools and public schools spreading across the nation. And while professional baseball may have been the national pastime, by the turn of the century, football was the fastest growing sport across college campuses.

“Against this new backdrop the felt pennant was born,” he said. “It began as a decorative novelty intended to showcase collegiate pride. In that sense, they were first marketed toward college students, and they were mostly intended as display pieces on one’s bedroom wall or college dormitory. So, the earliest pennants from the 1900s were collegiate pennants. They were comprised of two or Above: In the 1960s, producers of pennants began to include the names of each player on that particular team on the pennant itself. Names of any Hall of Fame players nearly doubles the pennant’s value. (photo submitted)

Below: Common name for the Cleveland Indians were the “Tribe” and the “Wahoos”, the latter referencing their longtime logo, Chief Wahoo. After it came under criticism as part of the Native American mascot controversy, the team ceased using “Indians” following the 2021 season, officially becoming the Cleveland Guardians. Shown is a rare, Wahoo felt pennant from the 1948 season. (photo submitted)

See Pennants page 18

Below: The Montreal Expos no longer exist, making this pennant quite a collector’s item. The Expos were based in Montreal, Quebec and played in the National League from 1969 to 2004. Following the 2004 season, the franchise relocated to Washington, D.C. to become the Washington Nationals. This pennant is 28 inches long and is from the 1980 season. (photo submitted)

Midwest Music EXPO will offer seminars and plenty of all things music

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — The 2022 Midwest Music EXPO will be held on June 11-12 at the Hyatt Regency in Schaumburg.

The event will feature educational events for both novice and advanced collectors as well as booths filled with music of all types.

The earliest phonographs that were available to the public may be divided into two general categories: those playing disc (flat) records, and those playing cylinder records. Both formats were envisioned from the first (1877) by the inventor of the phonograph, Thomas Edison. After a slow start, cylinder records made of various waxy formulas became available in small numbers in the late 1880s/1890s, along with a very few expensive models of “talking machines” to play them.

One attribute that all cylinder-playing phonographs had in common was a “permanent” stylus (needle) made of sapphire, diamond, or glass. At the turn of the 20th century, this was a major selling point vis-à-vis disc-playing phonographs which used steel needles requiring changing for each record.

The most common cylinder-playing phonographs found today were manufactured by Edison, and certain models turn up regularly: Standard, Home, Triumph, Gem, Fireside (all with external horns), and several models of Amberola (with internal horns inside floor-standing or tabletop cabinets).

Next are Columbia

Graphophones, manufactured by the American Graphophone Company and sold by its sales arm, Columbia.

The flat disc record also appeared in the late 1880s, but these and the unsophisticated hand-propelled machines that played them were marketed primarily as playthings. By the mid-1890s, prices had dropped enough for middle-class families to begin buying cylinder phonographs and records, as well as the rapidly evolving disc-playing machines (called “Gramophones”) and flat records.

The Victor Talking Machine Company was the largest manufacturer of disc phonographs a century and more ago, and many of its products are commonly found today.

Columbia was the next largest seller of disc playing phonographs, and today a virtual alphabet soup of models can be found, some barely distinguishable from one another.

The Edison Phonograph Works didn’t manufacture a disc phonograph in significant numbers until 1913, and all known examples of Edison Disc Phonographs are internal-horn models. The disc records for these machines are a full quarter-inch thick and commonly found today. These discs, unlike those of Victor, Columbia, and most others, were recorded vertically: meaning the needle vibrated up and down rather than side-to-side. For this reason, Edison records cannot be played on other brands of phonographs without adaptors, and competitors’ records cannot be played on Edison equipment. The Edison Disc Phonograph was available in a variety of models until 1929.

Most people don’t realize that the cylinder and disc formats coexisted as competing products until 1929, after which time the 78rpm disc ruled supreme until the appearance of LPs in 1948, and 45s in the following year. Even so, the venerable 78 persisted as a viable product for another decade. Millions still survive in attics, basements, and barns.

As you’d expect, some collectors seek out particular music such as jazz, or certain artists such as Blind Lemon Jefferson. What might surprise you is that others buy records solely for their artifact value. For instance, most cylinder records are 4 inches long and 2 ¼ inches in diameter. Variations from this configuration – and the specialized phonographs designed to play them – are avidly pursued, regardless of what may be recorded on them. Some collectors focus on the hundreds of types of phonographs, keeping only a token few records to demonstrate their machines. Many record collectors have no interest in machinery; they purchase only those phonographs necessary to play the particular types of records in their collections. Other collectors want only cylinder type machines and records. Some collectors buy only “external horn” talking machines, similar to that seen in the famous RCA Victor trademark of Nipper listening to “His Master’s Voice.” Still others seek out Victrola-style phonographs with “internal horns” hidden inside attractive wooden cabinets. Some enjoy salvaging their finds from a pile of rusted metal into working examples, while others purchase only fully-restored phonographs. Whether your interest is mechanical, historical, woodworking, or musical, collecting antique phonographs and records offers broad appeal.

There will be ample opportunities to learn, seek advice, purchase, or sell just about anything related to phonographs, gramophones, music boxes, and early recorded music. And you can socialize with other like-minded enthusiasts. Plus there will be an evening banquet, silent auction, and entertainment.

For complete details of the Midwest Music EXPO, visit <https://tinyurl.com/wnwzf3vm>

The Antique Phonograph Society, a non-profit organization, is a worldwide community of collectors and enthusiasts who share a passion for the preservation of antique phonographs, gramophones, and records. We encourage, promote, publish, and present general information and research on the history of sound recording and reproduction, including the machines that create and preserve these wonderful voices and sounds.

Auctioneer Gordon Riewe 1940-2022

Longtime auctioneer Gordon Elroy Riewe died May 11. He was born March 6, 1940 in Detroit, Mich. He married his wife Natalie in 1965.

In 1970 he and Natalie moved to Lapeer, Mich., and soon after started Gordon Riewe Auction Associates. An auctioneer for over 40 years, he served his community faithfully by volunteering at various charity auction events. He traveled the country doing carousel, pinball, video, and antique. He loved everything about cars including buying, selling, restoring and just enjoying them. Over his lifetime he owned over 50 T-birds.

One of Riewe’s greatest accomplishments was mentoring his son-in-law Brian Rowley into becoming a successful auctioneer himself. Gordy had a sense of humor that was unmatched. You could often find him telling a joke or an elaborate story. He and Natalie did a lot of traveling. He also loved to spend his free time at his cabin in Oscoda. For many years he was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Lapeer and sang in the choir. He never sat still for too long and was always onto the next big thing.

Riewe is survived by his wife, Natalie Riewe; daughter: Nikole (Brian) Rowley of Attica; grandchildren: Felicia Rowley of Sterling Heights, Brandon (Mariah) Rowley of Attica and Faith Rowley of Sterling Heights; sister: Linda (Jim) Hatcher of Howell; and sister-in-law: Jill Oakes of Winnipeg, Manitoba. He was preceded in death by his parents: Fred and Laura Riewe; and brother: Rick Riewe.

Riewe’s memorial service will be at noon on Friday, May 27 at the First Presbyterian Church, 433 N. Calhoun St., Lapeer, Mich. The family will receive friends one hour prior to the service. Please share condolences and memories with the family at www.MuirBrothersLapeer.com three-piece construction and the letters were hand cut and sewn on. All work was done by hand.”

Pennants

Pennants in those days were labor intensive and were hard to produce in great quantities. This meant they weren’t cheap. Still, they were popular and entrepreneurs across the nation raced to produce them.

A common observation among these early makers of collegiate pennants was their location. Many began their wholesale production in college towns, taking full advantage of their close proximity to obvious retail customers, such as those who frequented the local campus bookstore. For example, the Chicago Pennant Company started their business a stone’s throw from the University of Chicago. Collegiate Mfg. Co.’s roots trace back to Ames, Iowa, home to Iowa State University. And the Schloss Mfg. Co. spent nearly seven decades in Athens, Ohio, just up the street from Ohio University.

By the 1910s and 1920s, manufacturers of pennants lowered production costs and sewn letter pennants gave way to screen printed pennants, which could be stenciled on much faster. Two and four-piece pennants were phased out in favor of the more common one-piece pennant.

By the 1940s and 1950s, manufacturers began introducing two, then three, sometimes four or more colors to their graphic designs. Eventually, felt blends often contained rayon, a synthetic fiber.

By the 1970s, makers began making pennants from 100 percent synthetic materials. Graphics were printed directly into the pennant via a sublimation printer, not screen printed atop it. Tassels all but disappeared. Clever artwork uniquely created for each team gave way to standardized design layouts that were recycled from team to team.

Just a few years after the arrival of professional baseball pennants (which measured 18-20 inches in length, but eventually grew to 30 by 12 inches or 34 by 14 inches) came the mini pennants.

Over the years mini pennants were used as a premium, offered to promote products such as chocolate, bubble gum, cereal and bread. The mini pennants served an important purpose in the world of a child. It was a custom that kids would collect them and take pennants to the wall to reflect the current standings of the two eight-team leagues at that time.

One of the earliest of all mini pennants to surface measured 5.5 inches long and 3 inches wide. The pennants are loosely dated to 1913-1915 and were tied to the Cleveland and New York ball clubs. The New York franchise changed its name from the Highlanders to the Yankees in 1913. Cleveland made the change from the Naps to the Indians in 1915.

In 1916, the Boston-based Ferguson Bakery offered 6 by 3 inch player pennants. A series of premium mini pennants were issued by two gum companies between 1936 and 1938. Red Ball Sales out of Chicago and Grandpa Brands Co. of Cincinnati. Each pennant was given away with the purchase of a stick of gum. The pennants vary in size measuring approximately 3 3 to 2 inches high and 4 to 6 inches long.

The American Nut & Chocolate Co. of Boston introduced the “Double Play” line of candy in 1946. A 1 1/8 inch diameter metal pin and a 4 inch mini pennant representing one of the 16 major league baseball clubs was inserted into each 5-cent box of candy. The pennant featured a team name and logo.

Then in 1950, a second set of mini pennants were

Above: In the 1950s, every can of Tom’s Hostess Peanuts contained miniature Major League baseball pennants such as these. The promotion wasn’t very popular at the time, but they’re sure collectible today. Note the teams include Milwaukee Braves, Kansas City Athletics, Washington Senators and Philadelphia Athletics. Those teams no longer exist, making this set quite valuable. (photo submitted) offered by the American Nut & Chocolate Co. A set of 22 white 4 by 1 3/4 inch pennants that featured red-line drawings of individual National League players, with the American League produced in blue-line. To the right of each player was a facsimile autograph. The company offered the entire set of 22 player mini pennants for 50 cents.

From 1953-1958 many gumball machines carried mini pennants, though they were quite small. Sixteen teams (eight American, eight National) were offered, which featured the team name to the right of a thick border.

In 1959, mini pennants were offered through a mail order insert found in Topps baseball cards. That same year Bazooka comics offered free baseball felt pennants when one submitted 75 Bazooka bubble gum comics or 15 cents and five comics. These felt pen-nants measured 15 by 5 inches. Post Cereal offered a free cloth mini pennant inside each box of cereal in 1963. (Baseball cards appeared on the back of the box as well). There were 19 different team pennants.

“The felt pennants are still around,” Crawford said. “Go to a baseball game and you’ll see them for sale in the team shop at the stadium or at a vendor outside the stadium. Visit a college campus and you’ll still see them for sale in the bookstore. But a lot has also changed since the first pennants came into vogue at the turn of the last century.”

“There are those who collect felt pennants from just one team, then there are those who go for teams that are now defunct,”

Crawford said. “Those can command top dollar. For example, the Seattle Pilots pennant was made in 1969 by Sick’s Stadium Souvenir for the 1970 season. The Pilots lasted just one season. Ballpark, ownership and financial problems forced the team to relocate to Milwaukee, a decision made just six days before the start of the 1970 season. In 1969, Major League Baseball introduced the official MLB logo. The Seattle Pilots souvenir pennants with the MLB logo were stocked for the 1970 season, which never came. There are hordes of these pennants that were never sold and those are extremely common. But the original pennants without the MLB logo are very rare.”

The Seattle Pilot pennant without the MLB logos can fetch up to $150 apiece, Crawford adds. Crawford says

Above: Pennants that commemorate special events, or player milestones, are highly sought after. This souvenir pennant was produced for the 1962 Guest Grand Opening of Dodger Stadium. The pennant is dated April 9. The Dodgers’ first game that year was April 10. The Angels, a 1961 expansion team that played its games in south Los Angeles, moved to Dodger Stadium in 1962, playing their first game on April 17. The game was to honor both teams. Fans paid $5 apiece for a ticket, box lunch and this souvenir pennant. (photo submitted) the pennants from eight other now-defunct teams are hot items and coveted by collectors. Those include the Montreal Expos (1969-2004), St. Louis Browns (1902-1953), New York Giants (1883-1957), Brooklyn Dodgers (1884-1957), Philadelphia Athletics (1901-1954), Kansas City Athletics (1955-1967), Washington Senators (1901-1961) and Milwaukee Braves (1953-1965).

For those wanting more information check out the “The Vintage Pennant Price Guide by Mike Egner.

Below: Standard pennants are 28 inches long, but in 1936 mini felt pennants (4” x 1 7/8”) were the rage. Shown is a 1936 Brooklyn Dodgers pennant that was issued in 1950 in boxes of candy from American Nut & Chocolate of Boston. (photo submitted)

Left: In 1959, Bazooka bubble gum included a felt baseball pennant offer on their comics. A 16-pennant set was available by sending in 75 Bazooka bubble gum comics. The pennants measure 15” long and 5” wide. None of the teams shown on pennants here are in existence today. The Seattle Pilots (bottom pennant) were around just one season, that being the 1969 season. (Doug Graves)
