Weather cooperates for July Allegan Antiques Market

BY JACK KELLY

ALLEGAN, Mich. — The weatherman predicted rain but it didn't come true. Instead, moderate temperatures and light breezes greeted dealers and shoppers at the July 26 edition of the popular West Michigan monthly summer antique market at the Allegan Fairgrounds.

"This is like the spring day we were promised but never came" said dealer Jamie Stackhouse, who took a day off from her nearby store, Featherstone Antique Mall in Fennville, Mich., to attend the Allegan Show. "Family help" seemed to be a common theme at the July show. Frank and Susan Bednarek of Whitehall, Mich., and daughter Anna of Fennville hosted side by side booths and both were assisted by 7-year-old granddaughter Francine, a regular helper at the monthly event. Although the booths were said to contain a mixture of Americana and Modernism, the favorite for young Francine seemed to be a turn of century oak wood rocking horse with original paint, priced at $445 by Grandma Susan.

Still more family help was evident at the booth of Terry McBurney, Ada, Mich. Adult daughters Karen and Kristin were said to be in charge of research, pricing, loading and unloading plus "all

Murano glass has sparkled for centuries in Italy

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

Murano Glass is something of a misnomer. Murano Glass is not a company; it is an island in Italy near Venice. Murano is actually a series of islands that are linked by bridges in the Venetian Lagoon. While, historically, it was an independent community, today it is considered a suburb of Venice.

The Romans originally settled Murano and established a military garrison there. Historians believe glass production began in Venice around 450 AD; however, the earliest archaeological evidence of a glass factory in Venice dates to around 700 AD near the Venetian island of Torcello.

For centuries Murano was famed as a prosperous fishing port and as a major producer of salt. However, around the year

1000 AD, the population of Murano went into decline as the islanders moved inland.

In 1291, fearing fire and the destruction of the city's wooden buildings, the Venetian Republic ordered all of the glassmakers in Venice to leave the city and move, along with their furnaces, to the Murano islands. By 1400, glass export from Murano was flourishing, and Murano became famous as the glass-making center of Italy; although, the initial outpouring of glass objects was mostly beads, small mirrors, jewelry, glass mosaics, and window glass.

Among Murano's notable achievements is the invention of aventurine glass (glass with threads of gold), which helped the Murano islands become the main producer of glass throughout Europe. Murano's glassmakers quickly rose in wealth and became some of the islands' most prominent citizens. By the 14th century, glassmakers were allowed to wear swords, enjoyed immunity from prosecution by the Vene-

McBurney, a well known collector and published author of news articles concerning antique fishing lures and similar items served up a booth with more than 1,000 vintage goodies, including a 4-inch-long 1920s Heddon wood Tad-polly for $100 and a similarly aged Crab Wiggler that could be displayed in your den – or used -- for $75.

Little hands also were busy helping at the booth of Auddie and Krissy Borkowski, Old School and Bronson rounded out the sales team.

Above: Two vintage fishing lures were among the 1000-plus items filling the booth of sportsman collector and published author Terry McBurney of Ada, Mich.

western Michigan. The family is easy to spot, since they carry goodies and set up from an old fashioned big yellow school bus. They creatively changed the painted name on back from "school bus" to "cool bus"

Fire fighting collectors were drawn their spot to check out two round 10-inch-diameter cast metal and brass fire extinguisher signs, offered for $85 and $125 each, plus an early 11 1/2-inch-tall cast iron "fire-mark" house sign, indicating the property was insured, for $165.

Jane Kesteloot, Plain Jane's Antiques, didn't have to drive far to Allegan from nearby Mattawan to show off an item with a makers mark from nearby South Haven. Built by the Overton Co., the 1930-40s 3 1/2-foot-wide modernistic wooden table featured a removable oval shape top that could be used as serving tray. She estimated the age as 1930-40s and priced it at $300.

Halloween collectors stopped short to check out a glass display box full of 25 different items from that spooky holiday mostly from the 1950s and priced at $8 to $75 each, by Ray and Glenda Fultz, Three Rivers, Mich. When asked how long they had been showing at Allegan, Ray took a deep breath and blurted out, "Oh, gosh it's been about 20 years!"

"This is the best show in the state" said Doug Auer of Hastings, Mich., a "10 year shopper and 14 year dealer" of what he termed 'industrial, repurposed and country collectibles.' Many stopped to admire his pair of 8-inch and 12-inch tall tin and brass vehicle driving lamps that could be taken home for $125 and $225 each.

Known for his unusual finds, Dave Dent of Sarasota, Fla., did not disappoint visitors as he pointed with pride to a pair of 26-inch-tall vintage heavy plaster female figures shaped and painted as a Navy nurse and an officer. Thought to have been used in a Navy recruiter's office, they could grace your home for $185 each.

Advertising and automotive collectors hovered around the booth of Allegan dealers Don and Kathy Hoover of Valparaiso, Ind. Their 22- 35-inch instruction print of a 1941 Ford motor priced at $40 was the main attraction. Others checked out the couples' massive display of 1950-60 collectible Pyrex glass dinner pieces offered at $15 and up.

"This set of chairs is stopping everyone" said one shopper taking a close look at four early 20th century Francois Carre designer metal "Pinwell Chairs" shown by Greg and Roxanne Daugherty, Junk in the Trunk Antiques, Coloma, Mich. The set could grace your home for $550.

This year marks the 43rd anniversary the Allegan Antiques Market under the direction of 82-year-old Larry Wood and as is the case with many dealers — it's a family affair. The promoter has mentioned in recent years that his two daughters, Kelli and Terry, are taking a more active role at the popular market.

"No more 12-13 hour days for me," said Wood, adding I'll still be at the market, "but for a normal guy's 8-hour workday right now."

The Allegan Antiques Market, located midway between Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids, is held the last Sunday of each month during the warm-weather season.

tian state, and found their daughters married into Venice's most affluent families. Although strictly against Venetian Law, many Murano glassmakers moved to England and the Netherlands to establish glass companies.

For several centuries, Murano glassmakers held a European monopoly on the production and exporting of high-quality glassware. Some of the glass technologies that became associated with Murano glass include clear optical glass, enamel glass, aventurine glass, multicolored glass, milk glass, and glass-made imitation gemstones. In the 15th century, Murano glassmakers invented cristallo—which is almost transparent and considered the finest glass in the world

During the 15th and 16th centuries, Murano became Europe's luxury glassmaking center, and buyers from every country flocked to Murano to establish import business with the glassmakers on the islands.

In the 1700s, decline once again hit Murano as Murano glass techniques spread throughout Europe, and the decline has remained, making the islands a shell of what they once were. However, glass-making is still Murano's main industry.

Historically, Murano glass is made with a soda lime "metal," and the glass, especially the modern glass, is typically decorated with elaborate ornamentation. Among the glass forming techniques used for modern decorative Murano glass is various "hot" glass-forming techniques, as well as gilding, enamel, etching, and engraving.

The oldest Murano glass company still active today is Pauly & C., which was founded in 1866. Some of the historic companies that still own glass factories in Murano include Alessandro Mandruzzato, Venini, Barovier & Toso, and Ferro Murrano.

Murano glass beads were made in Venice as early as 1150 AD. These beads became popular for use as rosary beads and in jewelry making. Exportation of Murano beads quickly exploded. Murano beads were later used as "trade beads" with American Indians. In February 2021, Murano glass trade beads were discovered in Alaska at three prehistoric Eskimo Indian sites.

Today, tourists flock to Murano to visit the Murano Glass Museum, housed in the large Palazzo Giustinian, which chronicles the history of glass making from the Egyptian times through the 20th century. Other tourist-related glassworks include Mediaeval glasswork that is visible in some of the churches, chapels, and palaces around the islands.

To protect Murano glass from foreign market intrusion, most of the glass factories in Murano use a trademark certifying the glass products were made on the island of Murano.

Too hot to grill? Collect instead

BY BARBARA MILLER BEEM

The bags of charcoal briquettes and cans of lighter fluid are long gone, and all those meals of blackened hot dogs and charred hamburgers, topped off with marshmallows burnt to a crisp, have been eaten, digested, and forgotten. Back in the day, Mom might have been Queen of the Kitchen, but Dad was the undisputed King of the Grill. Years later, nostalgic memories of the Old Man taking his place before an open fire remain vivid in the minds of many. Little wonder, then, that today's collectors are scooping up cooking tools and eating utensils, tableware and colorful accessories that have survived over the decades since those mid-century backyard barbecues.

Al fresco dining is nothing new. Early humans cooked raw meat over a fire and then devoured it outdoors. Over time, this process was refined, and as things evolved, picnicking was something enjoyed by generations of folks, including the gentry, not out of necessity but by choice. Eating somewhere other than at the kitchen table became more widespread, spurred by increased mobility and thanks to the introduction of the automobile. In fact, some vehicles included picnic baskets and accompanying accoutrement, offered as accessories; these items are now collectable.

Fast forward to the days just after World War II, when returning veterans married their sweethearts and built their nests in the suburbs. No need to drive to a picnic ground when a warm weather party could be shifted from inside the house to the backyard, patio, or poolside. Somehow, food cooked and eaten outside just seemed to taste better.

Backyard barbecues became synonymous with suburban living. Hosts seated their guests at wooden picnic tables, often ones that they had built themselves. While some backyard cooks presided over portable charcoal grills, others went to the extreme effort of constructing a backyard brick barbecue (check out season six, episode 23 of "I Love Lucy"). Regardless of how

George Lebonick 1940-2022

SMITHTON, Ill. — George Joseph Lebonick died June 30 at the age of 81 after a battle with cancer. Among his many careers he was an auctioneer, antiques dealer and a show manager.

He was born on Nov. 14, 1940, in Uniontown, Pa., to George and Rose, nee Scalzo, Lebonick.

Joining the United States Air Force at the age of 18, George's love for travel began when he moved to Amarillo, Texas, for training and became an aircraft mechanic and crew chief. His time in the military eventually brought him to Tripoli, Libya, where he was introduced to the art of bartering, a passion that would change the trajectory of his life.

After being honorably discharged from the military, George attended Parks College in Cahokia, Ill., earning his FAA Air Agency Certificate. George began his career at McDonnell Douglas while his burgeoning interests in Native American artifacts, antiques, coins and ancient art bubbled under the surface.

On a wing and prayer, George escaped from his corporate contract work and tried his hand as a professional barterer, coin dealer, auctioneer, and antiques dealer, a career that would define him for the remainder of his life.

He and his wife Linn were married for 40 years. George loved spending time with his wife, children, and grandchildren; wheeling and dealing; all animals; and discussing politics over breakfast at Gary's Restaurant in Freeburg, Ill.

Surviving are his wife, Linn; three children, Sara (Jon) Musch, Jorin (Cara) Lebonick, and Lindy (Paul) McGuire and six grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to the Belleville Area Humane Society, or to the Siteman Cancer Center. Condolences may be expressed to the family online at www.rennerfh.com.

Burial with military honors was at Jefferson Barracks National Cemetery, St. Louis.

Bottle show will bring seminars, exhibits to Reno

RENO, Nevada – Antique bottle and glass enthusiasts will want to mark their calendars for July 28-31. That's when the Federation of Historical Bottle Collectors (FOHBC) will hold its 2022 National Antique Bottle Convention in Reno. The show and sale event will be held at the Grand Sierra Resort.

"I'm pleased to announce that this year's convention will be held in our Western Region, in the 'Biggest Little City in the World', and be our first national event after a two-year pause due to the pandemic," said Ferdinand Meyer V, past three-time president of the FOHBC and one of the driving forces for the event. "Along with the traditional bottle show and sale will be educational seminars, a judged bottle shootout competition, silent auction, cocktail party and banquet, membership breakfast meeting, displays, team bowling event, bottle appraisals, youth events, raffles and many other activities."

The many events will make for a packed itinerary. People don't have to be an FOHBC member to attend, but membership is encouraged and available at the show, plus online, at www.fohbc.org. There will be two very special exhibits at this year's convention:

- Top 25 Western

Whiskey Cylinders: This display is expected to attract a special grouping of bottles that will easily approach $1 million in total value. Such a display may never happen again and, with the help of the collecting community, will provide an attraction that, alone, is worth attending the Reno 2022 Convention to witness.

- Artifacts from the S. S. Central America: Come see this once-in-a-lifetime exhibit of recovered artifacts from the S.S. Central America known for its vast cargo of gold. The ship sank in a storm in 1857. There will be bottles, Gold Rush jewelry, firearms, luggage tags, photographs, currency, gold pokes, clothing and a treasure box and lid.

This year's FOHBC show is a must-attend for antique bottle and glass enthusiasts and members of the many antique bottle clubs scattered across the country. Diggers and pickers will also find the show of great interest. Antique bottle collectors are very passionate about a category of collecting that's enjoyed a meteoric rise in popularity in recent years. There will even be a free appraisal table for people to bring in their finds and possessions.

Educational seminars and their presenters include: Morgan Oyster Beds Bottle Finds (John Shroyer); Marbles (Jeff Wichmann); Grace

Brothers Brewing Co. (John Burton); and Dr. Charles Craig, Dr. John Henion and Hulbert H. Warner: Their Connections, Lawsuits, Competition and Eventual Business Demise (Michael Seeliger).

A pair of fun Youth Corner activities are planned for kids interested in getting started in the hobby. The first one involves Children's Bottle Grab Bags, where the FOHBC will provide about 50 bottle grab bags for kids ten and under, during the General Admission hours of the show (July 29-31). Each bag will have an antique hand-blown bottle, in good condition and embossed. Limit one bottle grab bag per child.

The other event is a Scavenger Hunt, for children aged 8 and up, at the GSR Summit Pavilion showroom floor. Organizers will prepare a list defining specific items, which the participants will seek to gather or complete all items on the list, usually without purchasing them, either individually or in small teams. The goal is to complete most or all of the items on the list.

For more information about the Federation of Historical Bottle Collectors (FOHBC) and this year's National Antique Bottle Convention, slated for July 28-31 at the Grand Sierra Resort in Reno, Nevada, please visit www.fohbc.org.

Grill Collectibles

elaborate the setting, in the end, cooking over the grill and eating outdoors was theater. And that created a necessity for props. Among those always on the look-out for mid-century barbeque-related items is Massachusetts resident Jimmie Bucci. Explaining why interest in these outdoor meals continues decades later, he suggested its roots might be found in pop culture of the day. “Maybe our fascination with picnics was inspired by seeing William Holden and Kim Novak in the 1956 film “Picnic,” he suggested. “Or maybe by seeing Julie Andrews and the von Trapp children in the Alps. Or perhaps it was just years of watching Frankie and Annette in all those Beach Party movies.” Whatever the case, there is a wide range of outdoor dining items still available on the market, ones that embrace the spirit of the times.

Begin with the grill itself. Surprisingly, tabletop models, as well as free-standing grills, still exist, many of them in pristine or like-new condition. Perched on tripod-like stands, some are diminutive (think table-top) while others are full size. Although many were used extensively at the time, Bucci explained, there are those that were a Father’s Day gift which, at most, was used on the following Fourth of July before being repacked in its original box and stashed away. As a result, what might have sold for $10 a bit more than half century ago can now command $200 to $300 (in good condition) on the resale market.

That is only the beginning. In addition to the grill itself, collectors prize sets of cooking utensils. According to Bucci, utensil sets might include forks, tongs, and spatulas, as well as skewers and brushes. Many remain complete and intact, in their original decorated boxes; as with many barbeque-related items, iconic graphics make these tools particularly desirable. Expect to pay $25 to $50 for basic sets, but more for those of particular interest.

As president of the Vintage Tablecloth Lovers Club, Bucci is particularly interested in tabletop linens, and there are plenty of barbeque-themed examples that survive to this day. Fabric tablecloths might feature images of grills and coolers, cooking utensils and picnic food, chef’s hats and men working the grill, as well as “campy” sayings. Prices for these tablecloths can be “well over $100,” depending on the graphics. He pointed out that, among the most desirable tablecloths are the select few that feature a woman as the “chef.” Terry cloth tablecloths are popular now among collectors, just as they were when they were new, in light of their easy-care feature. On the other hand, many outdoor diners opted for decorated paper tablecloths, examples of which have survived to this day. Additionally, decorated towels and napkins, as well as cooking mitts and aprons (including those designed for men) are also popular among collectors.

Although mid-century picnickers were not always as particular as modern folks are when it comes to leaving food unchilled for hours, coolers were popular then, and they remain so. Bucci noted that many people collect ice chests, particularly ones in a recognizable tartan plaid pattern; often red, they were also manufactured in yellow, pink, and green, as well as other colors. Also collectable are matching beverage coolers (including ones with spigots), ice buckets, and metal picnic “baskets.” There’s even a matching “Skotch Grill.”

Made of metal, plastic, or paper (it’s possible to find surviving unopened packages), dinner plates might be sold as a set or accompanied by matching tumblers; they may also include a place to rest a cup, or have dividers to keep the coleslaw and baked beans from running together. Bucci doesn’t pass up serving trays and platters if he finds the decorations appealing. Other accessories on the market include decorated flatware; invitations, complete with envelopes; and barbeque cookbooks. Hamburger presses and meat markers used to indicate the degree of “doneness” also assisted the chef and can be found today.

Bucci’s collection began in the 1970s, when these items sold for “next to nothing.” Today, prices for these, as well as for many mid-century collectibles, continue to rise and be strong. As for condition, he noted that some collectors are bothered by small dents and a bit of rust, which may or may not affect the price. For others, including himself, it “doesn’t seem to matter. I collect things for display.” Or to use. Even if “we are bothered by the occasional ant or two.”

Above: There she is: Mom sporting a pink toque and matching apron. Dad looks happy for her help as they cook on their built-in brick barbeque pits.

Above: Some “Skotch” barbeque accessories, including a fairly pristine matching grill, in a recognizable tartan plaid pattern.

Above: Of course the president of the Vintage Tablecloth Lovers Club would include a whimsical barbeque cloth (or two) in his stash.

Below: Unopened packages of paper plates and napkins: Maybe the picnic was rained out that day.

Below: Flatware with images of grills and outdoor chefs.

Below: Bucci, president of the Vintage Tablecloth Lovers Club, likes this cloth for its strong graphics. Note the records and record players and the wicker baskets, including one for toting bottles of wine.
