Peachblow (also spelled "Peach Blow") is a variety late-Victorian England glassware that manufactured by three Hobs, Brockunier and American glassware companies Mt.Washington (Massachusetts), New Glass was (Massachusetts), and Company (West Virginia), which produced Wheeling Peachblow.

Wheeling Peachblow is a two-layered glass with simple lines and delicate shading. Production began sometime after 1886 by J.H. Hobbs, Brockunier and Company Wheeling, West Virginia.

Peachblow glassware has an opaque, milkwhite glass encasing the inside like a liner and an outer layer of bright yellow glass at the bottom gently fading to shades of mahogany red at the top.

George Chapogas on the website www.efn. org/-venus/antique/ peachblow.html described peachblow glass as "a type of blown glass that has been treated with a variety of chemicals, causing the colors to become heat sensitive and then reheating portions of the glass to cause shading from one color to another." In the reheating process, the top of the glass piece was most often inserted in the transition. Merriam-Webster dictionary offers this simpler definition: "peachblow glass is a late 19th century opaque and often satinized art glass of graduated color which shades from red or rose to yellow or pale blue or white."

Wheeling Peachblow had two types of finishes — matte and glossy. Trade journals of the late 1800s called the matte finished pieces "Peachblow" and the glossy finished pieces "Coral." However, today, most of it is merely called Peachblow since, over time, dealers dropped the "Coral" designation.

While three companies manufactured Peachblow in the 19th century, Wheeling Peachblow, produced from 1886-1895, is considered to be the first company to produce Peachblow. making Wheeling the grandfather Peachblow glass. Wheeling Peachblow, a true American Art Glass, is rare and quite collectible.

Another peachblow manufacturer, Hobbs and Brockunier. used amberina-like colors, achieving the peachblow effect by moving the colors down each piece from bright fuchsia or purplishred to mahogany to bright golden daffodil yellow.

As with all glassware, Peachblow prices depend on a variety of elements, including condition, finish, color intensity, and even the colors themselves since the heating and reheating process often created pieces of Peachblow in slightly different colors.

Authentic, vintage Peachblow can be hard to detect since many different glass pieces move from one color to another. A novice collector would be wise to study books and every piece ofauthentic Peachblow that can be found. The majority of inferior, knock-off pieces that resemble Peachblow are made with two separate lavers of glass, and nearly all of these knock-offs are modern in manufacture.

In addition, during the 1950s, Gunderson Glass Co., a successor to Mt. Washington, produced a ofline Peachblow glassware. Gunderson pieces are thicker and heavier than Wheeling Peachblow. Moreover, in 1939, Fenton Art Glass produced a line glassware marked "Peachblow" and continued this line from 1952-56 as "Peach Blo."

The price of an authentic piece of Peachblow and the beauty it will bring to your home and collection makes it imperative that collectors deal with reputable dealers. Learn Peachblow's nuances, and you will be ready to search for some of glassware's most beautiful

If you are looking for additional information on Wheeling Peachblow, there are several good articles and books available. Glass Collector's Digest magazine, January 1998, has an excellent article on Wheeling Peachblow. Peachblow Glass Collector's Identification & Price Guide is a valuable book for peachblow collectors. Sean and Johanna Billings wrote this guide in 2000. Both of comprehensive these peachblow art glass references are routinely available on eBay.

Revnold Lowe of Materials Unlimited retires after providing treasures to the public since 1972.

Materials Unlimited evolved from a demolition company co-owned by our founder, Reynold Lowe. Trained in the fine arts, Reynold earned his MFA from the University of Michigan in sculpture and photography. While a student, he also taught in the School of Fine Art and the School of Architecture.

His artistic sensibilities naturally include a passion for architectural details! His first salvage job was an old house in Ann Arbor slated for demolition. What began as a personal project quickly led to an entrepreneurial venture! In 1972, Reynold joined forces with the demolition contractor and saved countless architectural treasures from the bulldozer!

The need for a retail outlet quickly became evident and, in 1972, Materials Unlimited was born! Reynold's treasures were originally housed in 3 pole barns on Morgan Road in the industrial outskirts of Ann Arbor, Michigan. In 1979, an unfortunate fire began two doors down. It spread to our neighbor, Farmer's Oil, causing an explosion of fuel oil that doused and engulfed our buildings. The inferno ravaged our collection! After the flames subsided, a lone potbelly stove stood in the ashes, misshapen by the heat

A true Phoenix, in 1981 Materials Unlimited re-opened better than before. Our "new" home is an historic Art Deco building in downtown Ypsilanti dating to 1926. It was originally a Studebaker Packard dealership, but served as a USO Hall and then a Moose Lodge before we moved in. Our 15,000 square foot showroom is comprised of three floors brimming with antiques, restored fireplace mantels, leaded glass doors, stained and beveled glass windows, salvaged hardware, and other architectural items. We are especially known for our collection of restored period

Over the years, Materials Unlimited has evolved into a full service facility. Our production department works five days a week restoring antique furniture and architectural appointments. Our lighting restoration department is a UL listed shop. We rewire our antique light fixtures using UL approved replacement parts to ensure safety while preserving beauty. Creative new uses for salvaged antiques are our specialty. We love transforming salvaged doors into front bars, church altars into bathroom vanities or kitchen islands, and beveled glass into headboards.

Fortunately today, historic buildings are more often restored than destroyed, but this does make salvaged details harder to find. We pride ourselves on having one of the nation's most impressive collections. It is exceptional and it is ever changing. Each visit to Materials Unlimited is different because Revnold is always seeking out beautiful and unusual items to offer our customers. Collectively. MU has years of experience with restoration, renovation, new construction, and, simply, decoration. We have loved helping people personalize their homes with beautiful antiques and architectural gems and cannot thank you enough for your support over the years!

Auctioneers Note: Materials Unlimited Owner & Founder Reynold Lowe is retiring after 50 years of providing historical architectural elements and unique antiques to the public! Braun and Helmer Auction Service will be conducting the Online Only Auction. Details can be found at www.BraunandHelmer Numerous sculptures were offered and eagerly claimed. Leading this category, the bronze bust entitled "Etude de buste pour le Portrait de la Comtesse de Noailles" was signed in the cast "A. Rodin" with the foundry mark "Alexis Rudier, Foundeur, Paris". Mounted on an onyx base, the overall height of the figure was 7.5 inches. Showing slight wear, it still commanded a final price of $9,500. Not far behind was a more abstract bronze sculpture by Clement Meadmore, Australian/American, 1929-2005. Titled "Dervish", this twisted metal bar mounted on a green marble base was dated "72" and numbered "2/10". Measuring 10 inches long by 5 inches high, it was claimed with a final bid of $9,000.

A fascinating array of "puzzle sculptures" provided an interesting and appealing visual presentation. Created by Miguel of timepieces were included in this auction, ranging from recent to antique. A 1929 vintage Rolex Gentleman's Bubbleback wristwatch featured an automatic wind movement, black dial, Roman and Arabic numerals, and sweep seconds. Complete with 14k gold case and a replaced leather band, this highly desirable watch left with a final bid of $3,500. An early 18th century silver case pocket watch by Thomas Windmills of London presented an interesting image. Displaying an engraved silver dial with Roman hours and Arabic minutes, this stunning antique was taken with a final bid of $3,500. A 1939 9k gold rectangular Rolex Prince Brancard Doctor's wristwatch with manual wind movement and silvered dial, Arabic numerals, and a separate dial for seconds went home with a final bid of $3,000.

Twelve exquisite René Lalique France figures were available, and quickly claimed. A graceful pair of late 20th century frosted crystal swan figures consisted of "Cygne Tete Droite" (swan with head up) and "Cygne Tete Penchee" (swan with head down). Measuring approximately 14 inches long and 9 inches high, they were taken with a high bid of $2,200. A mid-20th century frosted crystal "Bacchantes" vase measuring 10 inches tall left for $2,100, a 6-inch tall "Moyenne Nue" opalescent glass figure cleared $1,600, and an intricate frosted crystal figure showing two entwined Koi fish on a clear circular base called "Deux Poissons" finished at
