ACROSS THE AUCTION BLOCK

1903 bar measuring 20 feet long served $6,000 bid

BY NANCY KELLY

YPSILANTI, Mich. — Walking through the Materials Unlimited shop in downtown Ypsilanti was like walking through a portal back in time. Owner Reynold Lowe had spent the last 50 years salvaging furnishings and accessories from old homes, churches, train stations, and businesses and giving them a new life. The historic inventory included ornate windows, beautiful lamps, wood furniture, and so many amazing antiques from the 1800s and 1900s from around the Midwest, as well as France, Italy, and other countries. Recently, Lowe decided to retire and sell the contents of his business. Braun and Helmer Auction Service was hired for the task, and it required two auctions to sell off this massive selection of 555 lots.

In addition to the inventory for Materials Unlimited, Haab's Restaurant in downtown Ypsilanti added their massive 1903 Brunswick Balke Collender Company 20-foot birch bar which included the 20 foot backbar mirror, counter, and leaded glass doors. After serving the area for 87 years, this popular eatery and gathering place permanently closed its doors.

This massive fixture left for a new job with a high bid of $6,000.

A spectacular selection of restoration hardware was presented for consideration. Fourteen

The big eyes of Margaret Keane

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

If you like Amy

Adams as an actress, chances are you saw the movie Big Eyes, a 2014 American biographical drama. The movie covered the relationship between American artist Margaret Keane and her second husband, Walter Keane, who, in the 1950s and 1960s, took credit for Margaret's phenomenally popular paintings of children with big eyes. The movie focused on Margaret's long battle to receive recognition for the paintings she created.

Today, Margaret Keane's paintings and prints are still highly collectible. In the late 1950s and throughout the 1960s, her work flourished and was hung in hundreds of thousands of American homes, in dormitories, in galleries, and in art museums. Today, while artistic passion has changed, many people still collect Keane's big-eyed people.

Peggy Doris Hawkins, better known as Margaret D. H. Keane, was born in 1927, and she died in 2022. She became famous for her oil paintings of women, children, and animals with big eyes. Keane was a very successful artist due to her inexpensive reproductions on prints, cups, and plates. Due to print transfers, Keane's work was literally everywhere for a while. Speaking once on why she painted Big Eyes, eral other useful replacement parts were eagerly claimed with a high bid of $725.

Lighting fixtures and parts dominated this auction, with many beautiful options available. Leading this category, a set of three antique Arts & Crafts single lantern hanging fixtures were accented with decorative strapping around an etched glass cylinder. They hung 16 inches and were dated circa 1915. This stately trio found a new home with a high bid of $700. A much more elaborate example came with an interesting history. A pair of antique late Victorian silver-plated gas and electric sconces with ornate scroll arms and original etched glass shades were from the James Gamble house in Cincinnati, Ohio, one of the founders of Procter and Gamble. These delicately designed wall mount lamps drew a final bid of $675. An intricately crafted pair of 1910 cast bronze ship lights from a Chicago mansion added a nautical flair and were taken with a high bid of $600. Stained glass windows and other objects were prominent in the inventory of Materials Unlimited due to the period of the homes that were salvaged. An Arts & Crafts stained glass window with stylized floral motif in its original pine sash measuring 32 inches tall by 31 inches wide featured green stems, red flowers, and a yellow border all displayed on a frosted glass background. This attractive piece finished with a high bid of $600. An eye-catching, 72-inch-tall antique Colonial Revival style window with a diamond lattice amber glass field and a central symmetrical design in a rustic wood frame proved popular, drawing a final bid of $550. For something completely different, there was a transom window from the Clifford Presbyterian Church of Chicago, Illinois. Dated to the late Victorian period, the richly colored arched window, predominately orange with other highlights, displayed in the original pine frame measured a massive 76 inches long by 38 inches tall. This unique treasure was claimed with a final bid of $400. Furniture found at this auction was consistently unusual and in very good condition. Dating to circa 1820, there was a quality mahogany Sheraton style drop leaf table sporting carved rope twist legs and scalloped edges around the attractive inlay top. Ready for a new assignment, it drew a final bid of $650. A handsome 1885 walnut bookcase with four wood shelves and two glass doors featured a carved crown and two drawers in the base complete with original hardware and key. Able to command attention in any setting, this wonderful item drew a final bid of $525. A delightful Arts and Crafts style circa 1910 oak full mantel that was salvaged from the All Saints Catholic Church rectory in Detroit stood 103 inches tall and was taken with a final bid of $425. There were many other useful items, including cabinets, washstands, shelves, tables, and doors. The solitary grouping of wall art did well. It consisted of a set of three Delft blue tiles featuring religious figures, a pastoral scene in Holland with sheep in the foreground and a windmill in the distance, and an interesting vintage oil painting signed by “Madox” featuring a woman in a long white dress leading a white horse through turbulent water. This group was taken with a final bid of $525. The only toy was the antique pressed steel metal firetruck “Little Jimmy” made by Kingsbury Toys, with wind up key and adjustable ladders. It retained all its original parts, including tires and stickers, but was in worn and rusted condition. It still managed to pull a final bid of $220. At the two opposite ends of the spectrum, two items stood out as beautiful in their own way. A sturdy, solid porcelain two-piece white oval pedestal sink that was supported on a round fluted base included the original brass and porcelain hardware. The handles were labeled “hot” and “cold” and the faucet bore the label “waste” This early 1900s American fixture drew a final bid of $270. A delicate hand carved antique marble decorative urn with acanthus leaf rose flower details from Italy stood 30 inches tall. This graceful artwork closed with a high bid of $260. Braun and Helmer Auction Service has a very busy schedule in the coming months. It can be viewed at <https://braunandhelmer.com/upcoming-auctions/>

Schuco Fex could turn somersaults and still land on its wheels

BY ERIC BRYAN

In a shopping plaza about 15 miles south of San Francisco, there used to be a store called Hobbyville. It was the only local hobby shop, and carried mostly plastic kits, model rockets and radio-controlled aircraft. But in a back corner was one of those illuminated glass display cases with shelves inside it. On the top edge of the case were buttons which, when pressed, caused the series of shelves to carousel up or down, allowing you to view all of the wares inside.

The shelves were laden mostly with figures and cannon and accessories made by Britains Ltd. On one shelf was a tinplate Schuco four-door saloon in turquoise, about six inches long, with a plated grille, headlights and front bumper, and red-painted metal wheel rims fitted with gray rubber tires. Its rounded shape, long hood and exaggeratedly short windows and windshield made it seem to be something out of a late 1940s or '50s cartoon or comic strip. The model also had decorative chromed strips on the fenders, chromed trim around the windshield, chromed front door handles, and a chromed hood ornament. I used to go and look at this Schuco with each visit to the shop over the span of a few years, until I finally obtained it.

My acquisition was the Fex 1111, which Schuco of West Germany produced from 1951 to 1965 (some sources suggest an earlier start year). Fitted with a clockwork motor wound through a hole in the left side by a Schuco number 2 key, the steering could be set via a sliding lever situated in a slot in the front bumper. (In the instruction leaflet, the lever handle is referred to as a "lamp.") A pressure switch protruding from the underside between the rear wheels engaged the action of the wound motor when the car was set down on its wheels. It would travel straight ahead or turn circles depending on how you'd set the steering lever.

A special feature of the Fex 1111 is the lever in the back with a tab labeled "SOS." With the lever slid in/forward, the car runs at a leisurely pace. Sliding the lever out/back has the effect of invoking the power of a supercharger, and the car races off at high speed. Based on this feature, the instruction leaflet which accompanied early releases of the Fex 1111 described the model as "the unbelievable Hell Driver Car," while the instructions with later issues announced the Fex as "The breath-taking Dare Devil Racer."

The later leaflet explained: "Schuco Fex 1111 performs crazy circles, turns somersaults, lands again on its four wheels and continues on its course. This amazing action is attained by pulling out the lever marked 'SOS' at rear of car and setting front wheels for circular drive." The earlier leaflet told that the "Fex will start a wild race in circles, somersault around its longitudinal axis and fall back on its wheels to continue the ride." That is, the car doesn't tumble end over end, but rolls 360 degrees when reaching its highest speed in a turn. When righted, the Fex 1111 continues into its next turn, tumbles again, rights itself, and so on. The Schuco designers must have perfectly matched the weight, size, body shape, wheelbase and track of the car to its motor power and speed, in order for it to land perfectly on its wheels as it comes out of each rollover.

Unless performed on a forgiving surface, this tumbling maneuver will of course scratch the model's lovely paintwork. The Fex 1111 though does have a metal band strapped across its roof, bearing "Schuco Fex," which seems to be designed to function as a rollover guard.

For simple non-motorized play, the Schuco instructions advised to set the front wheels for straight ahead travel, pull the SOS lever out (without having wound the motor), and then use the Fex 1111 as a "push-toy" or "freewheeler."

Besides turquoise, colors of the Fex 1111 include red, green, light green, burgundy, blue, light blue, cream, gray, black, and very deep blue or green. Cream and the dark colors are considered scarce. The black tinplate chassis reads "Made in US-Zone Germany" on earlier models, and "Made in Western Germany" on later issues.

More fun was in store by combining the Fex 1111 with another Schuco item, the Magico Garage 500. As the instruction leaflet noted, "Use Schuco Fex for 15 instructive and fun-filled games in connection with the Magico Garage 500."

The Fex 1111 was reissued in 1999 in the Schuco Classic range, ref 01720, in red. Another reissue appeared in 2012, a black and yellow Fex 1111, ref 01721. A further Fex 1111 reissue is ref 01722, released in November 2015. This model is in beige and brown, and was limited to 1,000 pieces. The first two Schuco Fex reissues were marketed in window boxes, with reproduction carded boxes and facsimile instruction leaflets included inside. The 2015 reissue was sold in a special presentation box, and included the repro carded box and instruction leaflet inserted.

Also available from Schuco was a promotional sign, ref 08519, advertising the Fex 1111. Introduced in 2014, this red and yellow tin litho sign features artwork from the Fex 1111 box and instruction leaflet, showing the rollover action of the car. This collector's item was limited to 1,000 units. Schuco further reissued the Magico Garage, ref 01081.

If the Schuco Fex 1111 strikes your fancy, you'll be wondering about values of this classic German model. Both vintage and reissue examples in excellent condition with or without boxes have auctioned for $50-100. Sales results increase to an excellent red model with box and leaflet going recently for $310, and another red Fex 1111 graded as excellent with an excellent box falling under the hammer for nearly $650. The black and yellow version is the scarcer of the reissues, showing auction values of $90-150. A vintage variant in light blue with red stripes running along the hood line and window sills, said to be rare, recently realized $180.
