Chinese folding screen tucked away a $6,000 bid at Epic

BY WILLIAM FLOOD

LESLIE, Mich. — Epic Auctions and Estate Sales held its premier art, antique, and design auction on March 2.

Works spanning the 18th through 20th centuries were available, from designers and artists like Pablo Picasso, Harry Bertolia, Arthur Bauman, Herman Miller, and dozens of others. In total, 513 lots were auctioned in a real-time virtual simulcast auction, with online bidding offered via HiBid.

The auction's high went to a good-condition 19th-century Chinese silk folding screen. It bid to six times pre-auction estimates, at $6,000. The eight-panel, 132-inch-wide, screen was decorated with watercolor landscape imagery and ink calligraphy.

Also reaching $6,000, also several times estimate, was a Sun Manufacturing Company bicycle cigar trade stimulator. The circa 1900, roulette-style machine was in semi-working condition, and had its key, but needed some restoration.

Above: Two items hit $6,000 winning bids, including this beautiful 8-panel Chinese silk folding screen.

While realized prices on the remaining lots dropped to under $3,000, a dozen captured five-figure bids. One was a mid-century Hvidt and Molgaard-Nielsen for Soborg Mobelfabrik teak credenza that sold for $2,500. The 65-inch-long piece was in excellent condition, with just a hole cut in the back to accommodate power cords.

Among the other five-figure winners were two Phillip Vander Weg (American, 1943-) paintings on canvas. One of them, an 83 by 71 inch piece entitled, "Dance #2" reached $1,900. The other, a similarly-sized signed and dated, yet untitled piece portraying people, went for Fenton's ruby glass has collectors seeing red

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

Brothers Frank and John Fenton founded the Fenton Art Glass Company in 1905, planning to become a recognized art glass manufacturer. Fenton founded its glass factory in Martins Ferry, Ohio, in an old glass factory once owned by the West Virginia Glass Company.

In 1906, the brothers moved their factory across the Ohio River to Williamstown, West Virginia, producing their first glass at this new location in 1907. John Fenton left the company in 1908, founding the Millersburg Glass Company in Millersburg, Ohio.

From 1905 through

Left: Vintage, circa 1950s, Fenton ruby red oil lamp, converted to electric, with marble and brass base that is valued at $400.

Antique, circa 1920s, Fenton ruby red amberina Art Deco vase, with dancing ladies motif, which is valued at $300.

1920, Frank Fenton was the designer, decorator, owner, and inspiration for Fenton Art Glass. Fenton studied and was greatly influenced in his creativity by two other glass creators — known as the developer of chocolate and golden agate glass.

In late-1907, Fenton introduced an art glass that would change art production for the next 30 years — carnival

$1,800. A painted metal kinetic sculpture, done by Arthur Bauman (1931-2019) in the style of Alexander Calder, also hit $1,800.

Nearly two dozen lots grabbed between $500 and $1,000. Interesting items included a good-condition World War II Japanese Type 98 Shin-Gunto Katana sword that struck $850. The 33-inch weapon had a 24-inch blade and came with a scabbard and a custom leather cover for the scabbard.

A 19th-century bronze sculpture by Jean Gautherin (French, 1840-1890) entitled "A Girl as an Allegory of Summer" landed a solid $650. The artist-signed piece also bore the mark of bronze founder Ferdinand Barbedienne (French, 1810-1892) and the mark of Achilles Collas (French, 1795-1859) the developer of the "Reduction Mechanique."

Bidding went to $500 for a Packard Motor Company lap blanket from the early years of Detroit's automotive industry. The 69 by 49 inch taupe piece featured micro-striped wool flannel on one side and glossy plush on the other. Its label read, "Custom Motor Robe Tailored for Packard Motor Car Co. of Detroit Mich."

Above: Many good antique pieces were picked up for less than $50, including this hand-painted wicker Chinoiserie storage chest taken home for $35.

Dozens of lots bid into the lower three figures. A respectable $275 won an Alexander Calder (American, 1898-1976) original color lithograph entitled "Stables" from 1963. The 15 by 10 3/4 inch magazine plate from "Derriere le Miroir" had text on its reverse, was unframed, and had some minor conditional issues.

Coming close, at $250 was an untested 1957 F. G. Ellerman sunburst wall clock with key-wound movement. The 34 1/2 inch metal and plastic timepiece was made in France. Bidding on a Craftsman-style leaded stained-glass window came in a bit lower at $140. The 23 3/4 by 20 1/2 inch piece of architectural salvage was in as-found condition with some hairline cracks in the glass.

More than a third of the lots sold for less than $100, making for some exceptional buys on high-quality collectibles. Among them was a circa 1950s Premco pagoda boat lamp with a red, tiered Venetian shade. While it had some gilt and paint loss and visible repairs, it still attracted $90.

A circa 1988 framed watercolor by Edee Joppich (American, 1931-) sold for just $80. Measuring 53 1/2 by 39 1/2 inches framed, the piece depicted textiles and articles of clothing in contrasting black, white, and red. Also at $80, one lucky bidder took home a complete 1920s oak cottage dining set. It featured a drop-leaf table with four matching stenciled and hand-painted chairs. The good-condition set had only expected surface wear, spots, and minor paint loss.

Things got even more interesting with the 100+ items scored for less than $50. A cubist etching entitled, "Mother and Child" by Osip Zadzine (Russian, 1890-1967) was picked up for just $45. The matted print was a restrike, signed in Above: Over a dozen sculptural lamps from the 1930s-1970s were offered. This 1950s Premco pagoda boat lamp with a tiered Venetian shade brought $90.

Above: A high-quality 40-inch wooden boat model, built by Michigan artist Roger Burley in 2014, sold for $450.

Above: Mid-century modern lovers were certainly drawn to this French-made Ellerman sunburst clock. It was taken home for $250.

Right: More than 50 three-dimensional art pieces were available, ranging from pre-Columbian to late 20th century. This 80s-era Arthur Bauman mobile went for $1,800 reverse. Going for about half of retail at $45 was an 18 inch Hopi-style Kachina by Tony M. Espinoza. Another Kachina, by Bob White Eagle, made it to $40.

glass, which became one of the earliest forms of collectible art glass.

The Great Depression, roughly the 1930s, changed art glass production. Consumers had no money to waste on pretty glass objects, and due to the bleakness of the economy and world they lived in, most consumers lacked the imagination to enjoy art glass. Fenton Art Glass rolled with the times and began producing every day-use, practical glassware, such as mixing bowls and tableware. But economic turndowns could not stop creative juices from flowing, so Fenton continued producing new and exciting glass colors. In 1938, as a glimmer of new prosperity dawned in America, Fenton Art Glass produced colorful perfume bottles for the Wrisley Company. These highly collectible perfume bottles were made in French opalescent glass with a hobnail glass pattern.

Hobnail glass renewed popular interest in art glass, and by 1940 Fenton was selling hobnail glassware in French Opalescent, Green Opalescent, and Cranberry Opalescent. During the lean years of World War II, hobnail glass continued to sell well, keeping Fenton Art Glass afloat and giving it a basis to expand production after the war.

By the late-1940s, Fenton Art Glass was once again a stable and growing glass company, and then tragedy struck. In the space of just a couple of years, the top three creative members of Fenton's management team died, leaving the company with a major void. Frank Fenton and Wilmer "Bill" Fenton took over the reins of the company, becoming the President and Vice President, respectively. These two men would set the stage for the expansion of Fenton Art Glass over the next 30 years.

It is difficult to state if the public favored one Fenton glass color over another color, but it is easily defended that, in general, red or ruby colored glass has always captured the imagination of the general consumer and the Fenton Art Glass collector.

Fenton produced several red colors, including its famous cranberry art glass color. But due to its deep, soul-possession intensity, ruby glass has always been a favorite among collectors.

In general Fenton ruby glassware has appreciated in value quite a bit. The main reason for this is breakage, which causes scarcity in available and collectible pieces. However, Fenton ruby red glassware is still affordable, often selling in the range of $20 - $80.

Experts suggest that the way to distinguish quality ruby red glass from its cheap imitators is to look at the cuts used throughout the glass's design. The majority of ruby red glass has sharp, dramatic cuts that are clearly visible. However, let the novice collector beware: it is easy to confuse quality ruby red Fenton glassware with cheaper pressed glass.

There is a long history of red glass production, dating back to the dawn of glass making. From time to time, production of red glass rose and waned, moving with the tide of public opinion since the public is the consumers for any glass company. Still, ruby red glass has continued to capture collectors' eyes and imaginations, and even though we have moved into a new, 21st, century, the age-old practice of admiring and collecting ruby red glass still draws collectors.

Commercial building sells for $80,000

BY WILLIAM FLOOD

Mattawan, Mich. — On March 2, a prime corner commercial property, formerly the home of Lesterhouse Antiques, was offered by Michael Auction & Realty Service.

After 55 years in business, William Lesterhouse, now 88, retired and closed his esteemed antiques business. He decided to sell the building. At one time, the building was listed on the multiple listing service (MLS) for $269,000. The business was never offered as part of the package. However, the antiques inventory will likely be put on the market later.

An auction was eventually scheduled for March 2, with both live bidding and online via HiBid and GotoAuction.com. An open house was held on February 24 for interested bidders.

The building was constructed in 1893 as the town's Masonic Lodge. It contained 5,850 square feet and was situated on a 6,969-square-foot lot. The main floor and lower level were retail space formerly housing the antiques business. Both the main floor and basement had a kitchen and bath. The upper level was outfitted as a 2-bedroom/1-bath apartment, featuring exposed brick and redwood beamed ceilings. At one time, it served as Lesterhouse's residence. Utilities included hot water heat, central air, and city water/sewer. A new roof was installed in 2013.

Its location at 24020 Front Street in the heart of Mattawan provided good visibility foot traffic, and proximity to downtown shops and restaurants. The building offered an ideal opportunity for multiple, commercial and/or residential income streams. The upper residence could continue service as an apartment or could be converted to offices. The main floor could be returned to retail use or also converted into offices. The basement, which had its own entrance, offered additional rental possibilities.

Mattawan, population 2,600, is located in Van Buren County, easily accessible to I-94. It sits about 15 minutes southwest of Kalamazoo, in the heart of Michigan's wine country. The town's economy is driven by a strong manufacturing sector and nearby pharmaceutical research. Mattawan's downtown received an overhaul in 2009 attracting a variety of new merchants.

Lesterhouse Antiques had been an anchor in the small downtown for decades and was well-regarded in the region. Lesterhouse began his career in the antiques trade as a high-schooler in the 1950s, initially operating from his parents' house. In the late 1960s, he acquired and began renovating the Masonic Lodge, opening the doors in July 1969.

The building was uniquely renovated in Williamsburg-style colonial decor, with accouterments like brass chandeliers and Franklin stoves throughout. The main floor was divided into showrooms and contained features like interior bay windows, a moveable wall, and a Chinese screen wall divider. The second floor had a replica of a mural that President John F. Kennedy had installed in the White House, painted by Mattawan painter Leon Buckout.

picked up an amazing deal on a well-located building in strong condition. The final bid was $80,000, equating to $14 per square foot. And, while the sale did not include the business, the building held a few antique items and contents that were conveyed with the sale.

In an interview for MLive, auctioneer Sid Michael said, "There's been talk of a coffee shop or apartments going into the space, but it'll be up to the highest bidder to decide what happens." Lesterhouse responded similarly, "I want to see some new energy, I want to see what happens to it and what goes in there."
