Scott Shows offer plenty of variety

BY WILLIAM FLOOD

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Scott Antique Markets, with 16 shows across two cities, offer a unique shopping experience for antique and collectible seekers, with each event offering a distinct atmosphere. The November Columbus show contrasts perfectly with the chaos of Black Friday, while December invites shoppers to a “shop local” hunt for one-of-a-kind holiday gifts. January kicks off a new season, giving shoppers a chance to beat the winter blues and resellers a place to score some off-season deals.

Founded by Ohio native Don Scott, the events originally focused on traditional antiques and collectibles, including furniture, glassware, estate jewelry, militaria, and vintage toys. Over time, the markets grew to feature a broader selection, such as Persian rugs, upcycled décor, vintage clothing, and unique specialty items. Today five shows are held from November to March at the Ohio Expo Center in Columbus and eleven shows running from February to December at the Atlanta Expo Center.

The January 25-26 Ohio show provided a welcome escape from two weeks of snow and brutal temperatures that had gripped the Midwest. As the weather eased, eager shoppers flocked to the fairgrounds for a day of antique hunting. This round, the show was relocated to the smaller Voinovich Center at the back of the fairgrounds, a shift from its typical centralized and larger location at the Bricker

Hart banks were heavy hitters in the toy savings industry

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

Toy air rifle collectors may recognize the name

Henry C. Hart Manufacturing Company as a Detroit, Michigan, company that made the Hart “Matchless” air rifle.

If Hart had not had to compete with Daisy, Hart might still be making air rifles today. Still, collectors of toy banks are familiar with the name Hart for the line of toy safes it manufactured in the late-1880s. Although Hart Manufacturing is known to have manufactured toy banks, it is difficult to tell which toy banks were manufactured by Hart. Collectors strive to compare construction, lock mechanisms, finish, and even weight of the banks to speculate as to whether or not Hart produced certain banks.

Hart appears to have manufactured two types of toy safes—the “Safe Deposit” and the “Fidelity Trust.” Made of cast iron with brass handles and locking mechanism, all Hart toy safes have the same manufacturing date, May 12, 1885, incised in their bottom panel; although, the company made these toy safes for a number of years. The Fidelity Trust appears to have been manufactured in one size only, 5.25 inches tall, while the Safe Deposit came in two sizes. The smallest one was 5.25 inches tall and the large one was 8.5 inches tall and weighed nearly 12 pounds, making it a very heavy toy.

The large Safe Deposit was also the fancier of the two banks since the inside was lined in wood and had wooden dividers and a drawer, much like a real bank safe would have had.

Little is known about the Henry C. Hart Manufacturing Company today. The Book of Detroiters (Copyright 1908 by Albert Nelson Marquis) lists Edward J. Roney as having “Served apprenticeship as brass goods moulder with the H.C. Hart Manufacturing Company, and acted as Building. While Voinovich has housed the show before, it hasn't been the site of the January opener. The move was necessary due to redevelopment of the fairgrounds, including the demolition of several buildings, leaving limited space for concurrent events.

Though Voinovich was smaller and somewhat harder to find, dealers were generally pleased with the venue. They appreciated the easy load-in, made possible by multiple overhead doors, and good lighting that made merchandise more visible. The smaller size wasn't an issue, as the January show is smaller than others. Nevertheless, around 200 vendors filled 400 spaces spread across the main auditorium, a hallway traversing the building, and a smaller secondary space.

Dealers seemed quite pleased with the turnout. Show officials anticipated 5,000 to 10,000 attendees over the weekend. Since Scott doesn't charge admission, patronage benefits from spillover traffic from other events happening at the Expo Center. This time, four functions - including a golf show and a swimming pool/hot tub expo - brought a nice influx of shoppers on top of everyone who came solely for the antique show.

Compared to those pre-holiday, the January market had a distinct bargain-hunting flavor, with more collectibles and glassware than higher-end antiques. Many spaces featured $1 and $5 merchandise, giving the show an inviting, deal-hunting atmosphere. It's also one of the few places in the Midwest where resellers can load up on wholesale inventory during the colder months. Shop owners and vintage dealers were often spotted buying in bulk from show vendors.

While sports memorabilia and pop culture merchandise may have been prevalent, serious antiquers still had much to explore. Spread throughout were quality antiques like antique clocks, quilts, salt-glazed crockery, and primitive furniture. For those drawn to the decades of the 20th century, there was modernist furniture, vintage electric guitars, and restored stereo gear.

Many of the better antiques were offered by vendors who have participated at Scott for years. One of them, Natalie Palma from Cincinnati, co-owner of BN Antiques, has sold at every Columbus Scott show for 14 years. In her booth was everything from antique photographs to country store furnishings. It was also one of the booths where resellers were snapping up inventory.

From Columbus came Dennis Eifel and fellow dealer Ray Bullock, fixtures at Scott shows. Eifel specializes in early 20th-century Ohio-made pottery like Hull and McCoy and had an impressive array of Royal Copley wildfowl figures. Both he and Bullock praised the venue and noted how busy Saturday had been.

Representing the mid-century era — and making its Scott debut — was special guest Gay Fad Studios from nearby Lancaster, Ohio. Founded by pioneering female entrepreneur Fran Taylor, Gay Fad was a leading maker of glassware from 1939 to 1962. The brand was revived by Jason and David Ancey, who offer remaining sets of Taylor's original merchandise alongside new cocktail glasses that stay true to the originals, often hand-painted with atomic-era patterns.

Another new arrival was LeAnne and Kyle Taylor, owners of Columbus' Retro Revival.

Right: Parabolic magnifiers like this 19th-century one ($289) were used in medical and scientific settings before electric lighting.

Above: Nice pieces of primitive furniture were available, including this drop-leaf farmhouse table priced at $335.

These Etsy shop owners were dipping their toes in the show circuit for the first time and raved about their experience. Their repurposed televisions-turned-terrariums and dioramas made from upcycled consumer goods captured a lot of eyeballs.

If you missed January's show, the Scott Antique Market returns to Columbus on February 22-23, once again in the Voinovich Building. It will move back to the Bricker Building March 22-23. Hours are Saturday from 9 AM to 5 PM and Sunday from 10 AM to 4 PM. Parking at the Expo Center is $7 per vehicle, and onsite food service is available.

For more information visit: www.scottantique-market.com

Above: Multiple dealers offered antique timepieces spanning pocket watches to mantel clocks. This Royal Crown pendulum clock was priced at a modest $100.

Above: This stunning circa 1904 Ruud boiler, priced at just $275, was certainly a draw for industrial enthusiasts.

Above: Interesting antique smalls, like this early 20th-century educational math board ($45), could be found throughout the show.

Above: Glassware was prominent throughout the show, with pieces like these from Fenton sensibly priced.

7,400 SQ. FT. COMMERCIAL BUILDING IN PAW PAW, MI

ONLINE AUCTION

Selling Tuesday, February 25

PROPERTY DETAILS: A 7,400 sq. ft. facility situated on 4.39 acres on the corner of M-40 Hwy and 42nd Ave. Previously utilized as an Elks Lodge, this building offers many uses for a new owner! The interior features a walk-in cooler, kitchen, restrooms, large open spaces, an office, and a garage area. The interior is unfinished and requires drywall and reconnecting the plumbing. The building had a new roof installed in December 2023. The exterior features a parking area and a picnic shelter. The property is equipped with a well, septic, propane, and is prepped for air conditioning but will need new units. The property is zoned for agricultural use. Please review zoning and special use details for specific guidelines and permitted applications in the links below. This property has great investment potential, whether for business purposes, or personal storage. Don't miss out on this opportunity!

Albrecht Auctions will offer contents of Terry's Gun Shop

VASSAR, Mich. — Albrecht Auction Service of Vassar, Mich., will be offering the contents of Terry's Gun Shop via an online auction. The auction will begin on Feb. 6 and conclude on Feb. 11.

The auction will feature everything from every day guns to highly collectible firearms, along with hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition and accessories.

Terry Dennis was a gun enthusiast for most of his 80 years. Most photos from his early years show him holding a firearm of some sort.

Dennis died Dec. 19. He was born on June 4, 1944 in Saginaw, Mich. After serving in the US Army, Terry embarked on a career that would define many of his years. He owned Terry's Fruit Market in West Branch, Mich., for several years. He then joined Forward Corporation in 1987, dedicating two decades to the company until his retirement in 2007.

Following this chapter, he turned his long-standing love for firearms into a business, owning and operating Terry's Gun Shop for 17 years.

Above: A large selection of rifles will be offered.

His firearms expertise led him throughout the United States, dealing in appraisals and firearms collections

Hart Bank

superintendent of foundry of the company for eight years.” Surprisingly, Henry Hart is not mentioned in the Book of Detroiters at all.

The Antique Mechanical Bank Reference Guide (www.mechanicalbanks.com) lists a “Presto, Penny Changes to Quarter” toy bank that was made by Henry C. Hart Mfg. Co. in 1884.

According to Mechanical Banks Online, Henry C. Hart Mfg. was still manufacturing toy safes as late as 1898 when it produced the “Smyth X-Ray Bank.” Smyth X-Ray banks have proven to be quite expensive on the secondary toy market. One sold in 2017 for $2,700.

Two things all Hart toy banks had in common was they taught children to trust banks and save money and they were nearly indestructible.

The Hart Manufacturing Company may be best known for producing the “Matchless”

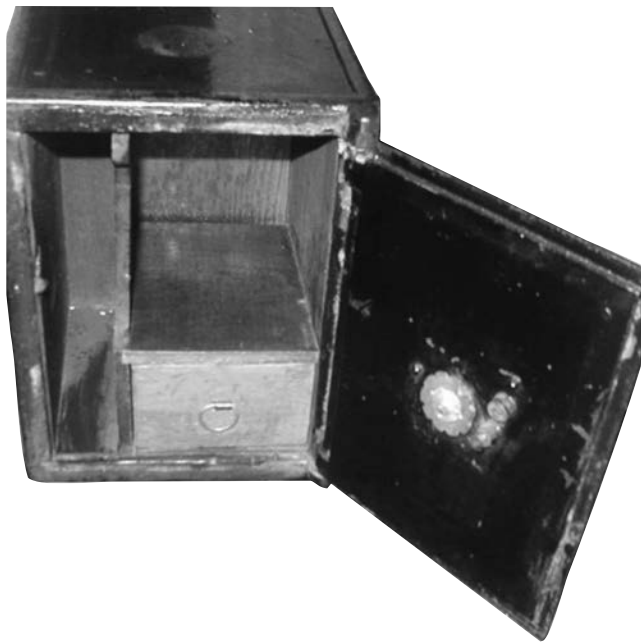

Today, collectors love Hart’s toy safes. Their rugged, cast iron construction allowed for many of them to survive the past 125 years nearly intact, making them highly sought after toy banks.

If you are looking for these vintage pieces of Michigan’s toy past, expect to pay about $150 for one of Hart’s safes. But keep it because it is guaranteed to earn you interest on your initial investment if you hold on to it long enough.

Above: This 1885 Henry C. Hart cast iron toy “Safe” bank is dated May 12, 1885 on the bottom, and it was manufactured in Detroit, Mich. This bank, like most of Hart’s, weighs approximately 12 pounds. It was offered on eBay for $165.

Below: Inside detail of 1885 Hart Safe Deposit bank. Note wooden compartments and simple locking mechanism that made this toy bank unique for the time.

with his specialties being Winchester firearms, Savage 99 lever action rifles and historic military arms.

“Whenever you came to his shop, he would be behind his desk, with his feet up, telling stories, (several of which were rumored to actually be true)! He was the classic knowledgeable, old gentleman that would invite you for a cup of coffee and talk guns, or anything else that would inspire a joke or another story,” according to Albrecht staff members.

Highlights of the auction include several Savage 99s, lots of Winchester 86 and 73’s, model 100’s and even a rare model 36 9mm rimfire. In Winchester shotguns, a near perfect Model 41, Model 12 in 20-gauge, and an excellent Model 12 trap. Also offered is a perfect Ithaca Model 51 with exhibition grade wood, and a nice Model 37.

For Ruger collectors, there is a rare Redhawk in .41 Magnum and an exclusive limited-edition Model 77 Hawkeye in polished blue walnut .450 Bushmaster, also a Ruger No. 1 in .450 Bushmaster, this is one of 25 ever made and new in the box. Also offered is an extremely rare Browning BAR 22 Rimfire, H&R model 700 .22 Mag. rifle and several Remington Model 17’s and 12’s.

In military firearms there are several Mausers, Enfield, and British rifles and a selection of Polish 9 mm pistols. For handgun collectors there are several Colts, including Huntsman 22’s and revolvers, some very nice Smith & Wesson revolvers, including an early 29-2, Model 36’s in blue and nickel, a
