1967 Austin-Healey runs to $21,400 at Rowley

BY NANCY KELLY

ALMONT, Mich. Rowley's Auction Service recently conducted an estate sale auction with great quality tools, collectibles, and antiques in excellent condition. But the star of the day was the charming British sports car. Prices here do not include the buyer's and brakes. Although it still required some minor work it was in running condition and ready to hit the road. It featured a black vinyl top, chrome wire wheels, woodgrain dash, and a 6-cylinder engine with manual transmission. Stored indoors and well taken care of, it exceeded the seller's reserve and earned a final bid of $21,400.

French Snow White postcards delight collectors

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

With the release of Walt Disney's version of Snow White focus once more turned to the earlier versions of this story.

Collectors have a wide variety of avenues to pursue if Snow White and the seven dwarves are of interest.

One specialized area of collecting is that of postcards. For those who want to specialize even more, consider the cards made by French firm E. Séphériadès Editions.

There is not an abundance of information 12-card Snow White on E. Séphériadès Edition, but it was a busy printing shop in Paris during the 1930s and '40s. From the late 1930s until the end of World War II E. Séphériadès of Paris designed and printed a large variety of Disney related postcards, beginning with its series, which, today, is a highly sought after series.

Beginning with Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, which was released in 1937, E. Séphériadès printed postcards reproducing still scenes from all of Disney's animated cartoon features. The printing firm obtained permission from Disney, and each postcard printed contained the copyright statement "Par autorisation: WALT DISNEY MICKEY MOUSE, S.A.," making slightly it unclear results with controllable flow rates and seed placement directly in contact with the soil. It was taken away for a new assignment with an impressive bid of $1,375. The hefty Porter Cable model 7550 175 PSI 80 gallon air compressor was a top-notch choice for powering any tool in the garage or workshop. The familiar brand name, large capacity, and excellent condition of this workhorse sent the final bid up to $950.

With a reputation for being the leader in blast cleaning since 1951, the Trinco company dry blast model 48/BP sandblasting cabinet with dust collecting hopper was a stellar representative of that technology. The ample bin measured 59 inches high and 49 inches wide, providing an exceptional ability to get the job done. It was reassigned with a final bid of $690. Other well-known brand names included a Stihl HT133 pole saw that closed at $372, a Delta model 17-968 17 inch floor model drill press that went for $267, and a Ridgid model R4512 10 inch table saw that finished at $237. A generous 14 drawer stainless steel glide toolbox standing 51 inches tall in very clean condition was eagerly claimed with a high bid of $520.

Along with the useful and practical items there were plenty of fun things to appeal to a variety of tastes as well. An ornate and elegant Triple Effect antique cast iron parlor stove was eye-catching beauty. It was model no. 5 by the F top for serving, and a beautiful finish was gladly taken home with a final bid of $160. Various tables, cabinets, dressers, and beds were likewise in excellent condian entertaining way to decorate a home, office, or shop while enjoying a bit of nostalgia or histo-tion and performed well. Advertising signs are ry. There were very nice examples in this sale. An antique Garland stoves and ranges light up dealer sign by Betts and Betts of New York included the vintage lamp socket and a wide wood frame all in very good condition. The stove company is over 100 years old but is still producing restaurant grills and ranges today. This attractive sign measured 12 inches high by 19 inches wide and was rehomed with a final bid of $356.

A couple of Budweiser advertising signs also proved popular. The rectangular neon bar sign included the letter A for Anheuser-Busch and the signature eagle on the top. This 16 inch tall by 31 inch long bright red emblem was taken with a $279 high bid. A very attractive Budweiser mirror hat rack was shaped like a bow tie and featured a polished wood frame, an ample shelf for hats or beer mugs, and three hooks below, each with the Budweiser logo. This handsome yet practical decoration measured 17 high by 24 inches wide. With the name Budweiser emblazoned the full length of the mirror, it found a new home with a final bid of $178.

There were other vintage signs including Moosehead beer, Signature Stroh's beer, and Wild Bill Cody, but one stood out that would inspire a smile or at least a second look. It was a brass rectangular plaque with a very official looking format measuring 3 inches high by 9 inches long that read "On this site in 1897 nothing happened". It left to proclaim its important message for a new site with a final bid of $33.

White as depicted in Disney's film. At the time, Walt Disney did not want the scarier images of the film printed because he was afraid parents would not take their children to see a violent animated movie, so the printing company did not issue postcards with the images of the Queen or the Huntsman on the card.

True collectors of Snow White postcards also search for the Dutch or German versions of Snow White cards, also issued in the 1930s, since the scarier characters appear on these cards, and the total number of cards issued for these sets was 25.

By 1945, Superluxe of Paris took over the printing of Snow White and other Disney movierelated postcards. French postcard collectors loved Superluxe nearly as much as they had loved E. Séphériadès.

Superluxe quickly issued a new set of Snow postcards. White incorporating 12-card set that E. Séphériadès originated and expanding the set to 25 postcards. thing One that confuses sometimes novice collectors is that Superluxe did not continue using the same card numbers that E.

Above: Walt Disney specifically did not want Snow White's Evil Queen depicted on E. Séphériadès first series of Snow White postcards because he did not want to scare children or parents away from his Snow White movie. This new card is valued at $4.

Séphériadès had used, so, for instance, card number 9 in E. Séphériadès series is card number 15 in the Superluxe series.

Erdal-Fabrik, Philipp Mühlen & Company, printed another German Snow White series of postcards, consisting of 24 cards, circa 1950, which also added cards with images of the Queen, Witch, and the Prince at Snow White□s bier. Philipp Mühlen also published a Snow White collector□s book to paste postcards into. Sadly, though, these pasted postcards are nearly worthless in value due to the damage caused when pasting them.

One interesting side note is that Séphériadès, after being gone for six years or so, reappeared and began production of postcards again under the altered name E.S. Séphériadès. The company continued printing postcards under this altered name into the 1960s before once again closing its doors.

Tri-State Antique Market will celebrate its 40th season this year

Ind. — The Tri-State Antique Market will celebrate its 40th season starting on May 4. Started in 1986, the Market has become an important regional destination for fans of antique and vintage treasures as it boasts 200+ dealers from several states at each monthly event. Merchandise from virtually every time period will be represented, from early 1800s furnishings to pop culture memorabilia from the 1980s, and everything in between. The market is a cornucopia for collectors, repurposors, thrifters and DIY decorators looking for their next favorite thing.

The Market continues to evolve to cater to the current collecting trends for vintage items in order to make each event a fun, relaxing and fulfilling shopping experience. Vintage clothing, antique furnishings, oriental rugs, uranium glass, sports memorabilia and so much more can be found at a variety of price points with bargains around every corner. The Market has also been proactive adding amenities and entertainment at each monthly date to make each show special, such as a photo booth camper, entertainers, scavenger hunts and giveaways. The market continues to offer free parking, modern restrooms, and local food and beverage concessions.

The Tri-State Antique Market is always held the first Sunday of the month from May through October and is located at the Lawrenceburg Fairgrounds, a five-acre facility conveniently located in southeast Indiana, approximately one mile west of exit 16 off I-275. The grounds are wheelchair accessible, and over half of the vendor booths are indoors or under cover, so the show is held rain or shine.

Official Market hours are from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. EST. A $5 adult admission is charged at all times during market hours. Attended pets and children are welcome for no charge.

Complete Tri-State Antique Market information, including detailed directions, area accommodations, and photos of past Market finds is available at www.lawrenceburgantiqueshow.com as well as the Facebook and Instagram pages under Tri-State Antique Market, or by contacting promoter Aaron Metzger at (513)702-2680. Later 2025 Market dates include Sundays June 1, July 6, August 3, September 7, and October 5.
