Minton boar head tureen eats up a $32,500 bid

BY KARIN MILLIMAN

WOLCOTTVILLE, Ind. — A majolica Minton boar's head tureen turned heads and kept the bids rolling during a recent five-day auction conducted by Strawser Auctions. If you think the prices of glassware have dropped, consider attending an auction held by Strawser Auctions.

The boar's head was the lid of the serving piece and was cut just below the eyes to leave the bottom half for the serving portion. It was created in muted greens and browns, with just a touch of yellow added to complete the finished piece. It still had the original matching fitted tray and is considered the rarest of all Minton majolica game tureens. It sold for $32,500.

A second Minton majolica piece brought an impressive final bid of $25,000. This was a beautiful blue and green table tripod jardiniere that stood on three legs, featuring some amazing decorative elements. The top was a shallow bowl with a muted blue

Right: Santa miniature oil lamp sold for $2,750.

This Minton majolica boar's head serving bowl reached a final price of $32,500.

Jenny Lind continues to sing in collectors' hearts

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

The Dyer-Botsford Doll Museum in Dyersville, Iowa, features among other things a massive portrait of Jenny Lind.

James Dyer, a 27-year old Englishman, came to Iowa in 1847 and became immensely wealthy on riverboat investments. He entertained President Ulysses S. Grant and other famous dignitaries.

One such dignitary was the "Swedish Nightingale," Jenny Lind, who was called the "darling of Europe" before she toured America, singing opera and ballads in over 100 different shows for the famous showman P. T. Barnum. Most of her shows were held along the eastern seaboard, but she did venture inland for a few shows. One such show was held in the opera house in Dyersville, Iowa.

Lind was famous before coming to America in 1850, but by September of 1850 she was the most celebrated woman in America, and, in many people's opinion, she was the world's first entertainment superstar and America's "songbird." Her popularity and her wealth would easily have topped 21st century entertainers.

Barnum spent a fortune advertising Lind, before he ever met her, and offered her the largest singing contract of the 19th century when he paid her $1,000 per night for 150 performances. On every poster advertising her performances, Lind was shown in often elegant, low-cut dresses. However, Lind was a morally straight, humble woman who wore plain white clothing while performing and always wore simple, plain makeup.

Left: This set of Jenny Lind paper dolls contains 10 costumes, each representing a different opera character. Jenny Lind celebrity paper dolls were popular in America in the 1850s and '60s.

Above: This portrait of Jenny Lind, from the National Portrait Gallery, is similar to the portrait of her on display in the Dyer-Botsford mansion. Her fame was such that many homes had images of her on the walls.

color, designed to hold any type of liquid, such as water or soup. Just below this bowl were three human faces with what appeared to have rams' horns and curly hair. There was a darker blue around the base of the bowl, which made the faces stand out wonderfully. Flowing down the three legs were some green ivy pieces that tied the entire piece together. It dated to 1858 and was made by Baron Marochetti, model number 718. It stood 40 inches tall. It was flawlessly made and presented a museum-quality look.

Bringing in an impressive bid of $17,000 was a Minton fountain. It was in the form of a large acanthus leaf and had a floral base. It measured 8 by 17 inches with a large wicker and daisy basin which measured 10 by 23 inches. There was a dolphin on a rock base holding the wicker and daisy bowl.

A cistern also placed high in the selling price of Minton. Baron Marochetti designed this cistern. It stood on four paw feet with two entwined snake handles on either end. The body had some leafy and trailing foliage, and a lion's head mask was positioned on either side below the rim. It measured about 4 feet long and 28 inches wide. It had an impressed Minton mark and a shape number 719 on the base. It still retained excellent color and detail. The final selling price was $16,000.

A large Minton majolica harvest ewer sold for $6,500. Pierre Emile Jeannest modeled this piece. The body had cherubs lying in a wood surrounded by vine leaves and branches. The base and body were molded with flower hops against textured gray ground. Below the spout was a pair of putti holding a head terminal. It had a Minton mark and model number 549 impressed on the base, along with a date code of 1861. It measured roughly 12 by 12 inches and still retained excellent color and detail, and was in great condition.

A very fine Majolica vase or umbrella stand sold for $4,000. This was a stork with fish and three-dimensional flower blossoms. It was signed by Krause and stood 22 inches tall.

Switching just a bit to figurine pieces, a Staffordshire Naval officer figurine sold for $4,500. This piece did have a professional repair to the base and the coat of the officer. This officer was holding the aristocratic pose with his right-hand fingers tucked inside his shirt. The flowing jacket was a deep Navy blue, and his hat was settled just right on his head. He wore white pants and black boots that rose to his knees. This Staffordshire figure had found a new home.

Following not too far behind, the Naval officer was a Staffordshire pair of gilded rabbits. They measured about 5 by 10 inches. They did have a professional base repair to the right rabbit, but the selling price of $2,400 showed this didn't bother the bidders too much.

Standing just over 13 inches tall was a Krause majolica decanter. This was a giraffe figural piece that had a professional repair to the ears and hat. This piece sold for $5,500.

Selling for the same price of $5,500 was a Hugo Lonitz pair of birds and bird nest wall pockets. There was a tiny hairline crack on the back of one. These measured about 9 by 7 inches.

A T.C. Brown Westhead Moore piece was sold for $2,750. This majolica maple leaf and wicker toast rack had one leaf that was professionally repaired. It measured 8 by 5 inches.

A beautiful conversation piece sold for $2,300.

A Sarreguemines majolica quail platter was responsible for this bid. There were three quail pecking wheat. It was set in a woodland scene and featured leaves, ponds, lilies, and foliage details. The rim was adorned with oak leaves and branches, set against a vibrant cobalt background. It measured 24 by 16 inches.

An item that surprised many people with its selling price was a lot of 15 cast-iron dollhouse furniture pieces. It consisted of a small table with two chairs, seven different small tables, a bed, two side chairs, a couch, and a three-legged footstool. They were in played with condition but still in excellent shape. It took a bid of $3,750 to secure this tiny set.

A second set of cast-

iron dollhouse items sold for $2,000. These all came with their boxes, which were unpacked from inside the original shipping box. A granite-ware looking washer machine, a stand, and a kettle to heat the water on, a double tub rinsing area, and a mangle iron completed the set.

Three unusual oil lamps turned up the prices. Manufactured by the Consolidated Lamp and Glass Company was a miniature oil lamp that stood less than 10 inches tall. It was made to resemble Santa Claus, who was depicted standing with his arms crossed and wearing black boots that reached above his knees. This unusual piece brought a final bid price of $2,750. A Vaseline uranium glass miniature oil lamp had clear feet. It stood just over 8 inches tall and drew a final bid of $2,500.

A skeleton bisque figural miniature oil lamp attracted a fair share of bids. This one stood just under 6 inches tall. It showed the skeleton from the waist up who appeared to be very happy with a big grin showing all his teeth. He was impressed with the bids to own him, which ran to $2,000 before it was marked sold.

Above: Made of cast iron, this was an unusual set of doll furniture for doing laundry, just like Mom. It brought a bid of $2,000.

Jenny Lind

In her portraits, including the one at the Dyer-Botsford mansion, Lind appeared to be a self-confidant woman with average looks and above average clothes. Poet Nathaniel Parker Willis said of Lind's portraits, "Her likeness is never quite what the average person has of Lind in his or her mind."

In her short time here, Jenny Lind captivated American hearts and imaginations. Streets,

cities, towns, buildings, ships, furniture and stagecoach trunks were named "Jenny Lind" in her honor. Arkansas has a town called Jenny Lind on its western border. It does not matter that the majority of Americans never saw Jenny Lind or heard her sing.

Today, Jenny Lind still has many admirers in the form of Jenny Lind collectors. When one walks through an antique store or previews items at an antique auction, one will probably encounter the name "Jenny Lind" on all types of furniture, including Jenny Lind baby beds, nightstands, and spindle beds. However, most collectors associate the name Jenny Lind with stagecoach trunks, dating to the 1850s and '60s. When Lind arrived in New York, she brought several trunks with her, which had been made in London. Trunk makers all over America soon began copying Lind's trunks, calling them "Jenny Lind" trunks.

Above: Jenny Lind trunk, circa 1855. This trunk has the classic "loaf of bread" styling on its ends and was offered on the Internet for $900.

When looking at Jenny Lind antiques, it is important to remember that "Jenny Lind" is not a brand name. "Jenny Lind" represents a style of furniture and decorator items that began in people's imaginations of the 1840s and continues to this day.

One category of Jenny Lind decorator items that collectors search for is Jenny Lind dolls, which come in a potpourri of styles. There are Jenny Lind paper dolls, which are quite rare; Jenny Lind porcelain head dolls; Jenny Lind half dolls; and Jenny Lind play dolls, which are rare and are often far more valuable than porcelain or manufactured dolls.

Right: Blue milk glass hatpin box with cameo of Jenny Lind on it. This box is nearly 10 inches long and is valued at $78.

Above: Willard Shepard carved this wooden, Jenny Lind ship figurehead. It is 18 inches tall and valued at $2,465.

Beloved characters and ornaments found new homes at Hixson auction

BY SUSAN EMERSON NUTTER

LAKEWOOD, Ohio — Resonating with each bid placed, Bill Hixson’s favorite phrase, “We do not have things for sale. We offer you memories” was never felt more than July 19 as Rachel Davis Fine Arts sold the contents and the memories created over the years at Hixson’s Flower Barn of Lakewood.

Opening as a modest flower shop in 1959, Hixson created an internationally recognized wonderland. Flowers were his mainstay, but he branched out and included Christmas items, designing ornaments that have graced prestigious venues including the White House during the Reagan, Bush, Clinton, and Obama administrations.

Box lots of ornaments from the Flower Barn sold during this online event with bulk lots selling anywhere from $700 to $400. Every whimsical ornament imaginable was on hand. A huge (1900 pieces, give or take) grouping sold for $700 and included pharaoh to a polar bear playing golf examples as well as traditional Santas, angels, and Christmas trees. Large lots of miniature ornaments sold in the $400

Below: Another Halle display rescued by Bill Hixson, this mixed media Wizard of Oz diorama featuring Wicked Witch, Tin Man, Lion, Scarecrow, Dorothy and Toto sold for $475. Included with the lot were four still photographs from the Wizard of Oz movie. The diorama measured 48 by 64 by 24 inches. The Wizard was added by Bill Hixson and was not original to the Halle diorama.

range. Eleven Metropolitan Museum of Art snowflake and star ornaments sold together bringing $450. The set included four sterling silver examples; six with a sterling silver surface with pure gold, and one copper surfaced with gold. All sold with their original boxes.

When the world renowned Halle Brothers Co., (commonly referred to as Halle’s) department store closed, Hixson had the foresight to snag some of their automated window displays which continued to delight shoppers at Hixson’s Flower Barn.

The most beloved display item from Halle’s was also the auction’s top lot. “Mr. Jingeling-The Keeper of the Keys” was created in 1956 by Frank Jacobi; a Chicago-based advertising exec and friend of Halle’s president, Walter Halle. He asked Jacobi to create a holiday character to promote toy sales. Jacobi created both a character and an origin story for Mr. Jingeling; saying;

“Mr. Jingeling was a locksmith who made keys for castle doors. One day, Santa lost the key to his Toyland workshop. Santa rushed to Mr. Jingeling begging for his help. Mr. Jingeling immediately went to the North Pole, created a new key for Santa’s workshop, and helped save Christmas. From then on, Mr. Jingeling became known as ‘Keeper of the Keys to Toyland.’”

The display featured a 28.5 inch tall composition Mr. Jingeling doll along with 25 cardboard keys and its Plexiglass display case, as well as a painted backdrop in the form of a book. It sold for $2,600 blowing away its $300 to $600 estimate.

Several other displays originally from Halle’s also did well. Automated, though not guaranteed to be working, composition dolls from the classic Dickson’s A Christmas Carole crossed the auction block with a 36 inch tall Tiny Tim bringing $700, as did the Bob Cratchet working at his desk.

Alice in Wonderland composition dolls were also up for grabs. The Ugly Duchess at 39 inches tall made $800; the Mad Hatter (30 inches tall) and Rabbit (33 inches tall) sold together for $550; and the wonderful Cheshire Cat was bid to $475. Tweedle Dum and Tweedle Dee sold together for $425, which is also the price paid for The Queen of Hearts.

Goebel bisque figurines did well. A vintage 1980 Goebel Hummel horse #46 013 24 with an incised signature in script of Gerhard Skrobek on the saddle blanket was won with a bid of $750, while a Goebel elephant #46 012 32 with a Weihnacht backstamp and incised copyright date of 1980 went for $500. This 11 by 13 by 6 inch pachyderm was from a nativity set.

A variety of leaded and stained glass windows were also on hand. Four Gothic leaded glass windows sold for $2,000. Two were arched (61 by 45.5 inches) and two were rectangular – one being 62 by 38 inches; the other 52.5 by 45.5 inches. A 40 by 80 inch leaded stained glass window transom in green, tan, and orange tones brought $900.

Two of the most iconic Cleveland Christmas items selling this day had to be the 16 to 17 foot tall Raggedy Ann doll. Greeting shoppers to Hixson’s since the 1960s, this doll had a cameo in the cult classic, Cleveland-based, Christmas movie, “A Christmas Story.” The doll realized $600.

And the charming carved and painted wood “Christmas Shop” sign from Hixson’s featuring cut-out carved lettering and a beautifully painted image of Santa was won with a bid of $1,200 against an estimate of $100 to $200.

Bill Hixson died in 2023 leaving Hixson’s to his business partner, Matthias Burke. Burke plans to continue the Hixson’s Flower Barn tradition but not at the store’s original location. “Our goal through this sale is to re-imagine Hixson’s by creating a smaller retail location or possibly pop-up venues in different communities,” Burke states. “We want to keep the tradition of Hixson’s alive.”
