Darrell Avery collection draws strong bidding

BY WILLIAM FLOOD

COLDWATER, Mich. — On May 14, Brian Hasty Auction Company conducted the Darrell Avery Antique Tractor Collection auction. At age 96, Avery decided to part with a portion of his collection after a lifetime in the farm equipment business. Avery spent nearly 64 years as a salesman for Wells Equipment in Litchfield, Mich., remaining with the dealership for two additional years after it was acquired by Redline Equipment before recently retiring.

Right: Farm toys included an IH 826 Gold Demonstrator Ertle in its original box that went for $80.

Celebrate Dad with a vintage postcard or two

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

In the United States, Father's Day is celebrated annually on the third Sunday of June, which is on June 21 this year. Father's Day is the one day each year, set aside, to honor one's father, grandfather, and the paternal bonds of fathers in society.

Father's Day began in 1909 when Sonora Smart Dodd, after attending a Mother's Day church celebration, convinced the Spokane, Washington Ministerial Association to celebrate Father's Day as a nationwide holiday.

Dodd's inspiration for a Father's Day came to her while she listened to a Mother's Day sermon in church. William Jackson Smart, Dodd's father, raised her and her broth-

Arkansas Light Artillery during the American Civil War. Dodd, proud of her father, saw him as a courageous, selfless, and loving man, and she wanted him celebrated along with other fathers. What's good for the mother is good for the father collection of well-restored tractors noted for their quality paint and attention to detail. A total of 124 lots were offered, including antique tractors, pedal tractors, die-cast toy models, agricultural equipment, parts and accessories, and a variety of household and farm-related items.

Seven vintage tractors representing several manufacturers crossed the auction block, including examples by Allis-Chalmers, John Deere, Massey Harris, Minneapolis-Moline, and Case models. Leading the category was a 1950 John Deere D tractor that brought $5,400. The tractor featured PTO, Powr-Trol hydraulics, new tires, and was reported to be in excellent condition.

The second-highest bid among the tractors was $4,550 for a mid-1950s Case 400 gas model. It was equipped with Eagle Hitch, hydraulics, and a rare set of front weights. Next in line was a mid-to-late-1950s Massey Harris 444 gas tractor that realized $3,850. A two-owner machine, it featured factory power steering, hydraulics, PTO, and wheel weights.

Coming close behind at $3,500 was a beautifully restored 1948 Case SC tractor fitted with new tires. Bids reached $3,350 on two different tractors: a 1951 John Deere B tractor with new tires and a two-owner late-1940s Minneapolis-Moline Z tractor equipped with power steering, lift cylinder, and belt pulley. Another offering, a late-1940s Allis-Chalmers WD tractor with like-new tires, changed hands for $1,950.

Pedal tractor collectors had two examples to choose from. Leading the category was a Case 20 Series pedal tractor in good cosmetic condition that sold for $675. A newer Farmall M pedal tractor followed at $500.

Several die-cast toy tractors also found buyers. An unboxed Case IH 9380 model landed $200, while an Ertl IH 826 Gold Demonstrator toy tractor brought $80. Another boxed model - an Ertl IH

Hydro 100 - rounded out the category at $70.

The agricultural equipment lineup featured several restored and antique implements. Topping the group at $800 each were a restored McCormick-Deering two-bottom, 12-inch plow and an IH 12-foot wheel disc in used condition. Later, an antique Michigan-made Gale walking plow brought $420, and a Syracuse model was grabbed for $110.

Parts and accessories generated steady bidding throughout the sale. A new set of John Deere Roll-A-Matic front-end tires sold for $420, while a set of three John Deere wheel weights reached $270. Elsewhere, a pair of Farmall Fast Hitch-to-3-point conversion links realized $90, and a front grille for a John Deere B tractor brought $80.

Further along, several lawn and garden items crossed the block. Leading the category were three lawn tractors. A Cub Cadet GTX 50th Anniversary Edition lawn mower took the lead at $4,250. Showing only 28 hours, it featured a 54-inch deck, hydrostatic transmission, power steering, and was described as being in like-new condition. A Cub Cadet 782 gas lawn mower with a 44-inch deck and hydrostatic drive rounded out the category at $975.

To go with those lawn tractors were items like an IH Model 10 lawn trailer, which brought $440, and a lawn roller that sold for $300. A set of lawn mower wheel weights rounded out the category at $100.

Other home and farm items, many of them antique, also attracted attention. A manual McCormick-Deering cream separator, complete with books and attachments, sold for $170, and an antique lard press brought $100. Meanwhile, there were modern tools like a Black & Decker router, complete with its metal carrying case and manuals, that realized $60, and a set of bottle jacks picked up for $20.

In all, the Darrell Avery Antique Tractor Collection auction offered buyers an opportunity to acquire well-preserved tractors, implements, and collectibles from a respected, longtime farm equipment professional, resulting in strong participation across all categories.

Ford Gumball machines provided happiness for just a penny

BY RICHARD JUNGER

Twenty-six-year-old roofing salesman Ford S. Mason was worried in the fall of 1917 that he would not be able to provide for his family of four during World War I.

His Baptist minister father suggested he fill gumball vending machines when winter snows made building new roofs impossible.

Mason ran with the idea, buying and servicing a couple dozen local penny gum machines in 1918 and 1919.

He soon discovered that there were many different and complicated devices that often damaged the gum. So, he decided to build a better machine.

Ford gumball machines were once common in stores, bowling allies, bars, and service. The chrome glass-globed Ford devices with charity signs had a special niche among those who recalled them from their childhood.

"The first purchase almost every 20th century-born American made ed by the elder Mason in 1919, their machines had fewer working parts, fewer still that rusted or broke, and were highly practical.

Only four of the earliest York 1-cent countertop machines manufactured between 1919 and the early 1920s are known to exist, all in museums. A large front tray caught and served the gum and the glass globes were embossed "York". Most were metal tagged "Ford Sales Vending Co., East Aurora, NY".

Mason's company was established in 1923 in Lockport, N.Y., moving to nearby Akron, N.Y., in 1949. The company added "Gum" to its name in 1934, becoming the was a penny in a gumball slot," former Indiana-based Ford distributor Steve Bear said.

Mason filled his machines with the well-known gumball brand called "York", short for "New York Chewing Gum". At night, he built new machines in his father's church basement with an embossed globe that read "York". Patent-

Ford Gum and Machine Co., as Mason perfected a secret gum formula that was better chewing and tasting than previous brands.

Mason had improved his first machine in the early 1920s, nicknaming it the Model F20 for the year 1920. Featuring a slightly larger globe than the original model with the embossed word "Ford" on it, the machine had a raised riveted coin-slot with a serial number and two "campaign-ribbon" decals on the sides. It had the same wide front gumball dish as the original York model. F20s were stamped Lockport except for a few from East Aurora, never Akron as with latter models.

Mason turned next to creating a national network of distributors and franchisees that bought and serviced the machines and filled them with his gum exclusively. "Ford" was the name of the company because the four letters fit better on gumballs than his five-letter surname "Mason".

He even developed a machine that printed the tiny letters on each gumball but failed to patent the device. Pharmaceutical companies soon borrowed the technology to put their names on pills, and M&M even used it for their hard-shelled chocolate candy introduced in 1941.

Meanwhile, post-World War II membership in service organizations like the Lions Clubs, Rotary International, Jaycees, and Kiwanis soared in part due to a desire among returning veterans to regain the social engagement and network building they had experienced in the military. New local clubs encouraged community spirit and fund raising as part of their service commitments.

A Columbus, Ohio, children's hospital had approached a Ford Gum distributor to raise money with gumball machines in 1939 and the idea spread within the company during the war.

His company developed a larger and heavier cast iron model in the late 1920s nicknamed the F30. It had a smaller delivery tray, only part of the coin slot was raised (with a serial number), and it had two side body "campaign ribbon" decals. The globes were flat, providing room for charity signs.

Another new model, designated F40, appeared after 1934 when the company added "gum" to its name. Most listed Lockport as the correct location, but some post-1949 models had Akron. It had a flat and unpainted coin slot cover and a flat globe for charity signs. The "campaign ribbon" decals were removed but other decals varied. Some were equipped with an awkward slug rejecter as fake coins became a problem during the Depression and World War II years.

Mason bought a surplus military DC-3 after the war ended and used the airplane to fly his franchise sales operation around the country. He enjoyed stopping at smaller airports and giving onboard demonstrations of his various machines, especially to service organizations. He even hired future President Ronald Reagan as a radio pitchman for his gumballs in the early 1950s.

By the company's peak in the 1950s and 1960s, it had sold more than 60,000 machines nationally as well as the gum to fill them. Hybrid F40s carried most of the charity signs, glued on top for young and old chewers alike. They were often made in chrome rather than painted iron, eventually read Akron as their place of origin, and had different decals but kept the familiar flat top globe and advertising on top.

Each machine could hold up to 600 gumballs and prime locations had to be refilled at least twice a month, generating up to $12 per machine per month. Charities received 10-to-25 percent of their gross income, up to $3 per machine. The rest went to distributors and franchisees except for Ford's lineups and continued the service organizations connection into the Ford. Most stores and businesses provided free space for the machines.

Mason sold his company in 1969 for $1 million. A series of subsequent owners added various gum products to Ford's lineup and continued the service organizations connection into the 21st century. With declining consumer demand for sugared confections however, Ford's gumball business declined.

The company's most difficult post-Mason challenge was inflation, especially in sugar which made up 75 percent of their product. Coin mechanisms had to be swapped in post-1970s machines to two cents, nickels, dimes, and eventually quarters. New machines sold bulk quantities such as rectangular Ford "Chicle Chews" for a quarter a handful.

Ford Gum estimated in 2010 that it had produced 50 billion gumballs during its first century of operation. Steve Bear of Plymouth, Indiana-based GumballStuff Bulk Vending Supplies purchased the machine division of the Akron, N.Y.-based Ford Company in 2023. The company no longer makes gumballs.

"With Baby Boomers, we're reinventing the Ford business," Bear said. "Home users and hobbyists aren't going away and we have the machines and parts for them to enjoy."

Right: Dual chrome F40s machines with charity signs on a Ford stand. The signs were attached to the flat globes with glue and often fell off. Sold for $150 in 2024. [Courtesy Donley Auction Service]

In the end, Ford Mason's genius was not just gumballs or machinery, but in gathering pennies efficiently. One penny seemed insignificant until it was repeated a few million times a year. Somewhere between the corner drugstore and the Kiwanis, Mason learned to never underestimate the power of loose change, especially when it was flavored with sugar and hope.

Above: This "Everybody working but father" Father's Day postcard is considered a thematic postcard and is valued at $14.

Above: Vintage, early 1900s, Father's Day postcard celebrating the one day when "Everybody Works But Father." This card is valued at $8.

was Dodd's basic logic for founding Father's Day.

The founding of Father's Day coincided with the Golden Age of Postcards, which most historians date between 1905-1915, so when Dodd kicked off Father's Day in 1909, postcard printers celebrated.

The historical concept of Father's Day postcards or cards in general goes all the way back to ancient Babylon when a youth there, Elmesu, carved the first known Father's Day card in a clay tablet, about 4,000 years ago. His special message to his father was "good health and a long life."

In Europe, Catholics have celebrated March 19th as Saint Joseph's Day since 1508. Joseph, of course, was Mary's husband and the man God chose to raise His son, Jesus. Catholics refer to St. Joseph as Nutritor Domini (Nourisher of the Lord). Spanish and Portuguese sailors and colonists brought this Catholic celebration of fathers to the Americas during the Age of Exploration. The Franciscans then helped keep the custom of celebrating fatherhood alive for nearly 600 years.

Protestants did not celebrate St. Joseph's Day, so when Dodd started Father's Day in 1909, Protestant families leaped at the opportunity to celebrate dear old dad, and many of these people celebrated dad by sending him a Father's Day postcard.

Even though Father's Day originated in 1909, it took a long time for America to fully accept the day. The first true Father's Day was held in 1910, and the first Congressional bill for a National Father's Day was introduced in 1913. President Woodrow Wilson supported the bill, but it did not become law. In 1966, President Lyndon Johnson signed an executive order naming the third Sunday in June "Father's Day." Still, it wasn't until 1972 that Congress passed an act officially making Father's Day a national holiday. Sonora Dodd was 90 years old when Father's Day became a national holiday, so she was alive to see her dream reach fruition.

Fortunately for collectors, there are numerous

Father's Day postcards still available on secondary markets. Between 1907 and 1910, 667 million postcards were mailed in the United States, so there are several million of them still in existence waiting for a collector to find them.

While there are many serious verses connected to Father's Day postcards, the majority of these cards that collectors seek are humorous postcards. Regardless of whether the card is serious or humorous, a Father's Day postcard puts a smile on any father's face.

Above: This is another humorous Father's Day postcard, circa early 1900s, showing Dad having trouble with a crying baby. This card was offered on eBay for $28.

Route 143 Yard Sale puts Appalachian Ohio on the map

BY WILLIAM FLOOD

June 6 marked the 17th annual Route 143 Yard Sale in southern Ohio. Stretching roughly from U.S. Route 50 near Albany south to Pomeroy, the event once again drew bargain hunters, collectors, and antique enthusiasts to a route lined with yard sales, food vendors, and community activities. Mirroring better-known regional sales like the Lincoln Highway Buy-Way and National Road Yard Sale, the Route 143 Yard Sale serves as an economic boost for the communities along its path. For one weekend, local residents, crafters, and resellers have an opportunity to convert unwanted items and accumulated inventory into cash or rent roadside space to vendors seeking a visible location along the route.

The event has become a fixture on the regional calendar, drawing shoppers from well beyond Athens and Meigs counties and building a loyal following of shoppers. "It has a Left: It seemed as if half of the sellers had Longaberger or quality Amish-made baskets, generally priced under $25.

Right: At a highly visible corner lot in Harrisonville, a 1974 Harley Davidson sold early in the day for $300.

strong regional pull and definitely something that people look for every year," said Aidan Reagh, executive director of the Vinton County Department of Tourism. The steady influx of visitors translates into broader economic activity along the route, as shoppers stop for fuel, meals, and local purchases throughout the weekend.

Reagh mentioned that the sale developed from a grassroots effort to combine what might otherwise have been scattered individual yard sales throughout the summer. "The community banded together instead of offering individual sales across the summer," he said. The catalyst was the leadership and volunteer firefighters of the Columbia Township Volunteer Fire Department, who helped formally launch the sale in 2009. Their efforts included investing in regional advertising to attract shoppers from outside the immediate area.

Today, the Columbia Township Volunteer Fire Department remains one of the event's central hubs, boasting both indoor and outdoor vendors and offering public restrooms, meals, and homebaked goods throughout the day. Proceeds help support the department's operations, including the purchase of emergency equipment and the maintenance of vehicles and facilities.

At the southern end in Pomeroy, Hillside Baptist Church serves as another major location, hosting a large number of sellers on its property. Along the way, the route passes through small townships, villages, and long rural stretches with roadside vendors selling Appalachian crafts, handmade goods, collectibles, and estate pieces drawn from generations of local households. Organizers with the Columbia Township fire department estimate that as many as 150 sellers participate. Roughly 40 to 60 of them are concentrated at the two main hubs, while more than 80 are spread across roadside locations along the route.

Among the vendors was a dairy farmer from nearby Wilkville set up outside the firehouse. A longtime participant in the sale, he said he is consistently pleased with the turnout. His inventory included an antique horsehair buggy blanket priced at $50, along with a selection of restorable antique manual sewing machines with attached cabinets, priced between $25 and $30.

Further along in Harrisonville - a small community founded in 1840, named for President William Henry Harrison - another seller took advantage of a visible corner lot at the intersection of Route 143 and State Route 684. He described steady traffic throughout the day. His standout item, a restorable 1974 small-displacement Harley-Davidson SX-175, sold quickly for $300. "I was going to restore it," he said, "I just decided to let it go. Sold it for less than I paid for it."

Even further south in Wolfpen, a family was in the midst of selling items from an in-law's estate at their homestead. The offerings reflected a lifetime of possessions, including a good-condition waterfall vanity and dresser, each priced under $50. Nearby was a circa 1920s console Victrola, offered at $50, and a portable version available for $25.

The stops unfold against a striking rural backdrop, following the rolling contours of the Ohio foothills. Hops farming and cattle ranching remain active industries here.

Unlike many larger regional yard sales that follow numbered U.S. highways, Route 143 is a narrow state route. Much of it is a tight, two-lane corridor with little to no shoulder, making parking and pull-offs difficult. In places, the pavement even gives way to stretches of loose gravel.

Compared with larger regional yard sales known for antiques and curated collectibles, the Route 143 event offers a more traditional yard-sale mix. Household goods and everyday items formed the backbone of what was available, while collectibles appeared frequently throughout the route. Traditional antiques, especially furniture and larger statement pieces, are less common in comparison.

The sale attracts a steady flow of traffic throughout the day. Shoppers largely come from Meigs, Athens, Vinton, and Wood counties, though antique pickers and road-trippers also travel in from other states. By day's end, the stream of traffic fades, and the road turns quiet again as shoppers head home.
