Porcelain Frontier sign pumped up bidders to $43,000

BY SUSAN
EMERSON NUTTER

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Held during their 39th annual jam-packed vendor show located in the Columbus, Ohio, Embassy Suites, June 25-27; Check the Oil, LLC, once again put together a stellar auction of highly desirable oil and gas memorabilia. The auction was held the last day of the show on June 27, and show attendees could preview and bid live or the masses could bid online via liveauctioneers.com.

A great selection of 470 advertising pieces related to the oil and gas industry including porcelain signs, neon signs, gas pumps, oil cans, advertising displays, and early automotive toys made up this auction which is often considered the highlight of the three-day Check the Oil managed show.

Auctioneer Andy Husser did the selling. The top lot of the day was purchased by an in-house bidder who offered $43,000 for an iconic "Frontier" gas and oil service station double-sided porcelain 60 inch in diameter identification sign. Featuring a detailed horse and rider graphic on each side, this example is one of the toughest to find versions of Frontier signs. The display side is graded 8.5 while the reverse is graded 8.25.

Prices reported are hammer prices and do not include the buyer's premium.

Calling all Tarzan of the Apes collectors

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

Most of us have heard of Tarzan of the Apes, but few of us actually know what the name "Tarzan" means. In ape language as explained in the novels, Tarzan means "White Skin," which, of course, Tarzan is. He is a white man who was raised in Africa by great apes, so he is, quite literally, Tarzan of the Apes.

Edgar Rice Burroughs wrote the first book titled "Tarzan of the Apes" in 1912. This novel was first printed in the pulp fiction magazine The All-Story in October 1912. Tarzan of the Apes was released in book form in June 1914.

Burroughs wrote 24

Tarzan adventures. His last Tarzan book was "Tarzan and the Castaways," printed in 1965, so he literally wrote Tarzan novels for 50 years. The first Tarzan movie, "Tarzan of the Apes," was a silent film

beauty selling for $37,500 was the “GMC Gasoline/Diesel/Trucks” dealership 30” double-sided porcelain advertising sign with its original bracket. Recently discovered at a Midwest dealership, this new-old-stock sign is undoubtedly the best example of its kind in existence. It measured 46 inches by 41.5 inches and is marked “Veribrite of Chicago”.

A bid of $26,000 was needed to acquire the “Chevrolet Super Service” double-sided porcelain advertising sign with black tips. The black tips is what makes it special and difficult to find as does the serif-styled Chevrolet lettering. The 49 by 41.5 inch sign was marked “Walker & Co. Detroit” and was graded a 9 on the display side and an 8.9 on the reverse.

Featuring loads of graphics and color for a double-sided porcelain sign, a General Motors “Red Crown Gasoline Ethyl” sign featuring the well-known crown graphic sold for $15,000. It was 30 inches in diameter.

Neon signs are always a hit with collectors and there were lots to choose from at this Check the Oil event. Leading this group was the hard to find “Chevrolet Super Service” neon and milk glass light-up single sided porcelain dealership advertising sign which made $25,000. Again having black tips, but also milk glass letters, this sign was also impressive in size measuring 66.5 inches by 61.25 inches by 12 inches.

A bid of $16,000 won another wonderful neon porcelain “Chevrolet” dealership “bow-tie” advertising sign. The sign had great gloss and color and the neon was in good working condition. The sign measured 85 inches by 10 inches by 29 inches, and was graded an 8.5.

Thought to be the only surviving example; a double-sided “Shell neon sign produced by Duranso Sign Co. of Winston-Salem, N.C., was also put up for bids and brought $14,000. According to the catalog listing, “These were professionally made by using original double sided Shell porcelain signs for The Quality Oil Co. which was the largest Shell oil distributor along the Eastern seaboard.” The sign measured 48 inches by 48 inch by 16 inches and was all original.

One of the more unique neon signs was the 7 foot oval “Ford” example that retained incredible color and gloss. The sign was marked “Meyers Outdoor Advertising Inc. Mpls.” The sign was unusual due to its size, but also because the neon had been added to this sign. However, no holes were drilled to do so. Measuring 83 inches by 35.5 inches by 6.5 inches, and graded an 8.9, this sign sold for $11,500.

Above: A bid of $37,500 won this “GMC Gasoline/Diesel/Trucks” dealership 30-inch double-sided porcelain advertising sign that included its original bracket.

Above: Large in size being 83 inches wide, this “Ford” dealership oval neon advertising sign was hard to miss. It brought $11,500.

A sign without neon but boasting milk glass letters that lit up was the 1920s “Garage Service/Repairs” double sided vertical sign. Beautifully restored and in working condition, one side retains the original milk glass letters while the other side has newly made identical milk glass letters. It measured 120 inches by 9 inches by 46 inches and sold for $19,000.

A non-sign advertising item that landed in the top ten best sellers list at this Check the Oil event was a museum quality “Red Crown Gasoline Polarine Motor Oil” delivery truck box or trunk. The wooden box with painted tin side panels showing early Red Crown and Polarine lettering sold for $17,000. It measured 51 inches by 24 inches by 16 inches.

REAL ESTATE BROKERS

Postcards are the perfect collection for small spaces

They're fun to send and fun to receive. Perfect for jotting just a few lines to stay in touch. Inexpensive and readily available for purchase, as well as less expensive to mail than a first class letter. Best of all, these small wonders, measuring 4 by 6 inches, lend themselves to vintage style. What's not to love about postcards?

Although some parents eagerly await weekends as an opportunity to go antiquing, such is not always the case for their kids. I speak from experience. Back in the day, with a young daughter in tow, we came to view a fledgling postcard collection as the obvious answer for keeping her occupied. With careful handling, postcards are not breakable. And for beginners, they won't break the bank.

Under a watchful eye, our daughter learned to thumb carefully through postcards picturing a favorite vacation destination, Colonial Williamsburg. New to collecting, she also learned how to organize and take care of what she bought. For the record, years later, this collection is one thing that continues to survive a number of her subsequent moves.

Just as postcards are ideal for introducing a young person to a lifelong hobby, at the same time, they can satisfy the urges of the seasoned collector. Again, I speak from experience. Even though my living quarters no longer include an attic or a basement, there's still nothing more relaxing for me than a stroll through the aisles of a flea market or antique mall. But how do you break a lifelong habit of filling up a large house with multiple collections? Once again, postcards, which take up little room, are a sensible alternative.

Not surprisingly, I'm not alone, as a general interest in postcards appears to be, er, mounting. Increasingly, serious stamp collectors are viewing postcards as a "niche" category. In addition to being interested in the affixed stamps, they also focus on the postmarks.

And then there's "Postcrossing," which combines the wonders of the internet with sending and receiving postcards. Since it was opened to everyone on July 14, 2005, nearly one million people from more than 200 countries have sent millions and millions of postcards to strangers who share their love of connecting through the mails. Check out postcrossing.com.

Other guilty pleasures are satisfied with a collection of old postcards. Quite simply, many of us enjoy reading someone else's mail. Handwritten messages, often sentimental in nature, can give us a peek into everyday life from a century ago. Without ready access to telephones, much less emails or text messages, postcards were the perfect way to tell a family member or dear friend, "See you tomorrow." All of this, just when you thought there was no reason for knowing how to read cursive writing.

These days, my personal postcard pursuits are primarily centered around tracking down ones for the purpose of making greeting cards, with album corners used to mount postcards onto cardstock. During the year, I enjoy looking for cards that might have a special connection to their potential recipients. Among those that I pick up are all cat-themed postcards for my young adult granddaughter, who has loved cats since she was a wee tacker. As an aside, not that long ago, she shared with me that she's saved every one of them. (Yesss!)

Sometimes, though, postcards are simply a gift to myself. I enjoy looking for vintage postcards from favorite vacation spots (not just the aforementioned Williamsburg). I can't resist those from "Pennsylvania Dutch" country (it's in my genes), the kitschier the better. When I find cards picturing the grand hotels that once graced Eagles Mere, it's hard to pass them up. Ditto anything showcasing Mohonk Mountain House. Finally, turn-of-the-last-century postcards from Baltimore, my hometown, are particular favorites, especially those photographed by Henry Rinn, Jr.

Above: A fun collection of so-called "Pennsylvania Dutch" postcards is kept in a vintage box that was manufactured in nearby Allentown.

Below: Appreciating messages on vintage postcards is another reason for knowing how to read cursive.

What to do with them? Framed, propped up on bookshelves, or stored in a vintage box, postcards not only serve as remembrances of times past, they also provide the perfect five-minute vacation, even if it's only a virtual one. All without leaving the comforts of home.

Now if I only had a penny for every time someone put pen (or pencil) to postcard to write "Having a wonderful time. Wish you were here."

So what about you? Have you tried Postcrossing? Let me know at VintageStyleAW@gmail.com. Or drop me a line!

Tarzan

in 1918, which was filmed in the marshes of Louisiana. In this first Tarzan movie, Gordon Griffith played the young Tarzan and Elmo Lincoln played the adult Tarzan. Most film historians consider this 1918 Tarzan movie to be the most faithful to the character and novels that Burroughs wrote. Griffith and Lincoln went on to play Tarzan in three sequels The Romance of Tarzan (1918), The Son of Tarzan (1920), and The Adventures of Tarzan (1921).

In all, more than 45 Tarzan movies have been filmed, and at least 20 different actors have worn the loincloth of Tarzan the Apes. Of those actors Johnny Weissmuller is considered the definitive Tarzan.

Weissmuller originated the famous Tarzan yell, which other Tarzan actors used or copied. Douglas Shearer, a sound recording artist, created Tarzan's yell by recording Weissmuller's normal yell, manipulating it, and playing it backwards. The yell is now as famous as the character.

Collectors love Tarzan and collect nearly everything associated with the character, the books, and the movies. Tarzan movie posters are colorful, exotic, and sell for hundreds of dollars at auction.

About the same decade that the first Tarzan movie was released, postcards, intended for writing and mailing, hit their historic peak. In fact, the Golden Age of postcards was 1907 – 1910, so in 1918, when

Above: This cute, 5 by 7 inch Tarzan postcard is from 2026. Originally sold at EPCOT at Disney World, this postcard was offered on eBay for $20.

Tarzan of the Apes was released, postcards were still at their all-time high.

Tarzan has an interesting association with postcards since movie postcards in general have been created from movie posters for at least the last 100 years. To create a postcard from a movie poster, all one has to do is transfer the movie poster's image to postcard stock and shrink the image to 4 by 6 inches.

Tarzan postcards are generally of two types — either a scene from the movie or a real photo postcard (RPPC), which is a continuous-tone photographic image printed on postcard stock.

Real photo Tarzan postcards often depict glamour images of Johnny Weissmuller or some other Tarzan actor. Many of these RPPC postcards were part of the Picturegoer Series that companies printed from 1939-1949. Using sepia tones, postcards of this era captured Weissmuller in poses that showed off the Apeman's strength, agility, and striking image. A RPPC postcard of Weissmuller crouched on a tree branch is sometimes offered on eBay for $36.

Images of Weissmuller and Jane or Weissmuller and Cheetah are often used for RPPC postcards along with some of the sets used for filming Tarzan movies.

The most popular type of Tarzan postcards are those cards created from Tarzan movie posters. At least 45 different Tarzan movies have been filmed; however, there are movie posters of Tarzan from many different countries and in many different foreign languages. When you add the number of Tarzan movie poster postcards to the number of RPPC Tarzan postcards, the number of possible Tarzan postcards to collect is almost limitless.

A Tarzan the Untamed promotional postcard from 1919, taken from the illustrated dust jacket, with artwork by famed illustrator J. Allen St. John, of the 1919 novel, Tarzan the Untamed, sold at auction in 2025 for $245. This postcard was printed by A.C. McClurg & Co. in 1919. Fans of Tarzan would write McClurg, requesting information on future Tarzan novels, and these rare, novel postcards were mailed to the fan, promoting upcoming books. On the reverse side of the postcard was a brief story synopsis of the novel.

Tarzan has endured as one of the most popular fictional characters of all time. On an Internet list of the 100 Most Iconic Fictional Characters of All Time, Tarzan of the Apes ranked #29.

Above: This 1998 "Tarzan and the Lost City" postcard was issued by Warner Bros., and it depicts Tarzan as most of his book fans think of him — a little scary. This card is valued at $14.

Above: This is the story that started all of the Tarzan legends—"Tarzan the Ape Man." This postcard is a movie poster postcard and is valued at $5.

Above: This jumbo postcard, 8 by 5.5 inches, is a movie poster postcard of "Tarzan & The Leopard Woman." The movie, starring Johnny Weissmuller, was released in 1946, and it is valued at $11.
